

going to be?" I said, "I'm gambling!"

DECISION MAKING WITHIN A SIBLING GROUP

(What if all twelve did share in it and one of them wanted to farm it--could that be worked out?)

Yeah. That would be up to them. I'll put it this way--there's five of us--me and Irene and Gertie, Ace and Blackie (these are Alfred's brothers and sisters). We got inherited lands. And it's working all right. We got oil in several places we inherit together. When it comes time to business, I'm kind of sort of adviser, or administrator. I don't make all the decisions. I like them to make it with me. I think things can be worked out like that, so it will be fair. I think I can depend on my kids. They can work out something together. Which I'm hoping. Of course they all know now that I got my--all my inherited lands and my lands already fixed out. That's including my wife.

(Some conversation on family matters and end of tape.)