

Well, you can replant it. You can, but if you're late, sometimes it'll make a few but don't make much--too late. Just like anything else, now. Sometimes dry weather, or hail, you know, beats them down. This hail, and you don't have nothing.

(How about your kaffir corn? Would dry weather ever keep you from having any of that?)

Yeah. If it's too dry, they just dry up. They don't make. They get so tall and they dry. Dry weather, you know. They don't head out--they just burn up.

(Is there anything you can do with it then--like, if it's too dry for it to make, can you feed your horses and cows the stalks?)

We never did done it.

(What would you do, just plow it under?)

Yeah, just let it dry up. It's too dry to do anything else, then. It's too late.

WEED CONTROL: CHOPPING AND USE OF "GO-DEVIL"

(Did you all have to do anything to control the weeds?)

Chop it.

(How would you do that?)

Get a hoe.

(Just chop it by hand?)

Oh, yes. Just like you chop cotton. People chop cotton like that. It's the same thing.

(Would you have to--like if you have this whole forty acres growing in corn, would you have to chop this whole forty acres?)

Well, unless you have to. Sometimes it starts growing crab grass bad, you know. You get you one of these sleds. It has a disc on there in the back.
