

String beans. I guess she had some of them--when you cook it, it always be like string, you know--when you eat it.

(What about squash and pumpkin--did she plant anything like that?)

She never did plant no squash--she planted pumpkin. She plant pumpkin and things like that.

(Where would she get her seeds for her garden?)

She buy it.

(Did she ever save her seeds--like pumpkin--?)

No--oh, yeah. Yeah, she saves pumpkin seeds.

(What about her squaw corn--did she ever save seeds of that?)

Yeah.

(What kind of pumpkins did she have? What did they look like--how big were they?)

Just pumpkins, that's all I know. Like these here pumpkins.

(Sometimes you see these that are sort of little--about this big around, and sometimes you see these great big ones--)

Yeah, they're just medium-sized. Some of them, pumpkins, are not too big.

She hasn't raised any real big pumpkins. She raised some that were pretty good sized but wasn't too big like some you see.

DRYING PUMPKINS AND CORN

(What did she do with all the things that she got from her garden--did you just eat it up right then, or did she ever can any or dry anything?)

Oh, no--she dry some of this pumpkin. I don't know how she did it. She kills them. And she always braided them. I don't know how she braid them--just let them cross, I guess. Braided and dried. She dried it.

(Was it--it wasn't dry when she braided it, was it?)

Oh, no.
