

there." She went over there. Sure made that old gentleman happy. Oh God, he was happy. About a year later, we went to his funeral in Skiatook.)

He was a full blood:

(Aunt Lucy Red Bird. And she was from (not clear).)

(Son: About this old shoe hammer I showed you a while ago.)

(Yeah.)

(Son: I believe dad's grandmother--is it grandmother or great-grandmother's.)

It was his grandmother's.

(Son: She used that hammer. After she came, she came west from Georgia you see. She used that down there where Starr Springs is, and that when that hammer was used back in Indian Territory.)

(Yeah.)

She settled down there by--oh, you know where Starr Springs is, on the hill there.

(Yeah.)

Down there where Stilwell is. I taught school there on the hill there.

Close to Starr Spring up on the hill there.

(Well.)

Up there on the hill there where there is a church house. When you tried for water there. I tell you they had some good meetings.

(Yes they did too. They had some good meetings at their churches.)

Yesh. Good singing, outdoor services.

(Out door services. Where was that at, Mrs. Tucker?)

Well it wasn't far from where we lived there. But I couldn't tell you the name of the spring. There was a big spring that run out the side of the hill there.

(Son: Prairie Spring.)

No it wasn't Prairie Spring. Prairie Spring was down the other way. Dipped
