

(Now it looks like there's four rows. Looking at it from the south.)

Yeah.

(Uh--there's row 1, row 2, row 3 and row 4. Now this apparently must be number seventeen. Must be the last one. It has a little old--you know--the mortuary metal marker.)

Yeah.

(Now that looks like the last one. But there's no record to see what was the funeral home and find out.)

You remember (inaudible) sixteen.

(Sixteen.)

Sixteen towards us here.

(Well, there's just a little marble stone there. And it just has J.F. on it.)

Mrs. Longtail: "That's Fritz."

(Fritz?)

Mrs. Longtail: "Yeah uh--you know--Joe Fritz."

Yeah, I thought that was kinda back this way, somewhere. Well, there was some grave right over here toward this corner.

(Well, I don't find anything there.)

There were I don't know how many buried. Gloria Harvey. It's folks. Some was buried there. Probably by--I imagine there's around five graves there.

(And those were the Harveys then?)

Yeah.

(All right. I'll just make a note here. Now, of course, the most important would be Jake Longtail. Let's see, number 13. As near as I can tell from the old stones--born December 20, 1867. Died April 21, 1910.)

Now this--
