

REPAIRING SHOES

(No, now that's something else I've never seen.) (Refers to a shoe last for repairing shoes.)

Well, you know, old times they had to make little sticks, you know, to peg the shoe together.

(Yeah.)

And they used this in the shoe.

(Oh.)

And peg it.

(And pegged it. Pegged the shoe.)

Yes. Through the soles.

(Well. They didn't use nails then in the--when they made shoes.)

Huh-uh. No, no. They didn't use nails. They didn't have any.

(Well now, isn't that interesting. Why that's something that people in this day and age have never seen! Something like this. And they--everybody, I guess, they made their own shoes, or most of them.)

Yes, Papa said that they used to wear moccasins.

(Yeah.)

And he said moccasins were warm in the winter time. But I figured that it was cause it was warm they could not--uh move their toes around.

(Yeah.)

And tried to (inaudible).

(Yeah. That would sound reasonable.)

Yeah.

(Well, I guess originally most of the people did wear moccasins; that is Indians did.)

Uh-huh. Yeah.

(Well.)
