

Oh no, just over here at Skiatook.

(Yeah, you're just right close to it.)

Yeah, right on the edge of it.

(Well, you know, I have heard in the old days that they used to be an Indian mission close to Skiatook. Did you ever hear of that?)

Well, its this Baptist--this is Hillside right down across here. Just straight west of here. Go till you see that place on the hill. Just go on the road that goes straight on west. That Sourdough mission--where that mission.

(What's his first name? Do you remember?)

His name is--

(It's not John is it?)

No. Well, I wouldn't know what it was or not.

(I've heard of John Sourdough. I want to meet him sometime.)

Well, you might see him today if you go by there.

(I might go by.)

Well, there's a lot of Indian children went there I've heard.)

Yeah, lot of 'em. It was just kind of like a seminary.

(Yes.)

In a way. There's lot of 'em around here. They have a celebration every spring. Just like they do at a seminary. Only its just one day like we do, always on Sunday.

(Yes ma'm)

They just meet on Sunday.

(Well, was that the only school around here in those early days?)

That's the only mission.

(Well, and they traveled for miles, I guess, to go there.)
