

I don't remember seeing any of them drunk when they go out and get a drink and come back and dance. If they got disorderly they got 'em out.

(Uh-huh)

Jenny: Oh thirty-five years ago, I'll say that. They probably kicked them off their land.

(At this point both Ida and Jennie are conversing at the same time. Most of conversation is inaudible) Buddy Shepherd up here. He was one of the more popular men around. They used to come out here to the dance. I thought she had the prettiest, she had a yellow taffeta.

(Uh-huh)

And I was little and I thought that was prettiest dress I ever saw.

U. S. MARSHALS TRAVELLED IN BUGGY OR HACK IN EARLY DAYS

(Did they have marshals or some law and order back in --)

Jenny: Oh no not that I know of. Did you have marshals in those days out here?

Flint: What?

Lady: Did you have a marshal out here in those days?

Flint: Marshal? Yeah, but they drove around little buggies and hacks.

Lady: He said they did.

Flint: Team and horses to hack.

(Yeah)

Flint: (Sentence not clear) Laughter.

(Yes they could--they just quit)

Lady: I can remember in Fairland they had livery stable up there. And Doc Miller and those old doctors had to come out here driving two horses to a buggy.

(Well)

Flint: They used to stop here. We lived around that corner, lived on the river.
