

Knocked him down. He started to get up. And he knocked him down again.

(Hum)

He jumped right up on his breast. Tromped that away like that. And crowed like a rooster, you know. And that old fellow wouldn't try to get up.

(Laughter)

(Yeah they--)

That big fellow was a tough one you know.

(Yeah they were tough.)

And he had a store. And I had one.

(Yeah. And you had a store in old Ketchum there.)

No, not at that time.

(Did you?)

No, we farmed then.

(Yeah)

He sold his farm. And he had a boy that wasn't too honest. It's old Barley-corn made trouble.

(That was when the drummers when they come around, you had to pay them.)

Yeah. I told him. "Ben now there's just one thing about me and you." "Let's don't have no words." "We don't have to." I said, "You either buy me out or I'll buy you out."

(Yeah)

Well, he studied, in a little bit. He seen I had him caught you know.

(Yeah)

Well, he said, "Tom, if you want to sell out." "Why I'll buy it."

(Uh-huh)

So he bought me out. And I just tied on to a brand new house, where we live at.
