(Don't you think that perhaps a gun is an invitation to more trouble than you get?)

Bob: Yes. Only thing to do is, I think, to--while you're working to go at it in a business like way and be form with them, and let them know you're not horsing around. Playing with them. Just like that Joe Hoof--he knew that I meant what I said there--that I wasn't sitting down. If he had anything to say to me, say it there. And this Indian that had hold of my lapels there--he was going to go home with me. I said, "You're not going home with me."

MORE ON THE LIMES AND COMMON LAW MARRIAGE

(Not too long after that little girl was beaten to death, here lately, there was some kind of a meeting in Canton and the people from our office went up there. Did you ever hear anything about what went on at that meeting?)

Bob: Yeah. They're afraid to talk. You cain't-they're afraid to talk. I went around to this Tommy's first wife that had that kid, you know. And I know what would happen. The mother-Tommy left that kid with Jenny Haag. And this Maggie Bull Coming went down there and took that kid just for a few minutes-to take care of him a few minutes. Took that kid and turned it over to Tommy's first wife. And Tommy said that she was up at the Baré-foot Powlwow. She was drinking and she took that kid-he just had a diaper on-and just three him at him-to take him. And she walked out on him and left him. And Tommy's in jail. And he should be concerned. He was talking to me about it and I said, "Tommy, you must understand that that's the mother of that kid. Unless you can get legal custody, she's got as much right to it as you've got." I said, "I'll see what I can work out on this." What I was trying to do was prevent a future killing. I know that if something isn't done to that kid, he'll get out of there and he'll kill somebody for that boy. But I said, "You must understand that you've
