

(Yes.)

Belongs to the Rowes, and Granddad Ragsdale was one of--well, he was the first postmaster that I remember in his day.

(Well.)

Claude's father. And then they changed it just to Rowe and then later it was Rose.

(Yes ma'am.)

First I (sentence not clear)

(Indians would resent them coming through here.)

(Sentence inaudible.) And Grandma Duncan and Grandma Ragsdale, I guess, started the first Sunday school here.

(Well.)

(Inaudible) Best I remember they started the first Sunday school. It was started up there in the schoolhouse. It was a big old log building.

(Well now, was that all grown up in trees at that time?)

No, it wasn't. (Inaudible) and there was a nice spring just this side of our property.

(Well, that must have been a beautiful place there.)

Oh, it was. It wasn't thick like it is now. The Duncan house was one of the first mansions in there.

(Well, the old Duncan home.)

Yes. It was one of the biggest. (Sentence not clear.) (Inaudible) three stores there at one time and a drug store.

(Well. Well, it was a town then at one time then. I've heard of Rowe so much.

(Remainder of tape not clear.)

END OF INTERVIEW