

dug it up himself and he said he went down there and Charley had come and done got it. Now there's a little old round kettle about that big and prints of money was just in the kettle. And Charley left the country now. I don't know whether that's the cause of it or not but he moved out north of Tulsa out there, Turley. But you can find lots of them I guess it's an old Indian graveyard right this side of Terecita store, down here oh, probably a quarter down there by the Terecita store, right there's a graveyard. An old Indian-- Next time I'm over there--

Mrs. Warren: --tombstones. Maynard Carnes told us--told us or somebody that there was a graveyard right south of that where that electric frame is up on the hill there. Did you every know there was a graveyard?

There ain't no graveyard south of there.

Mrs. Warren: He said there was.

Well, there ain't. I ain't accusing him of lying, but I been up over there filling that ground. I never did see no graveyard there.

Mrs. Warren: He found it--

There's a graveyard across the creek from Lucky, north over there.

Mrs. Warren: Well, I know it. I'm talking about south of there, on top of that hill. He said how come him to find it, he was hunting huckleberries.

I'm just sorry. It beats me. But there is one across from Lucky school house. There's an old Indian graveyard over there. I used to live right by it.

Mrs. Warren: He said it was right on top of that hill, just south of the spring.

(Where was that Lucky schoolhouse?)

Mrs. Warren: You ever been down through there ?

(Yeah.)

Mrs. Warren: It was just a straight highway. We used to go to Pine Tree and then go south. You go on straight east and you just keep following that main road. You wind around and finally go down a hill and just keep going, you
