

Catale.

(Catale. Yes that's what I was trying to think about.)

Yeah that--it used to be a little town there.

(Nothing left there now, is there?)

No. Just--lots of people lived around there. But there ain't no store or anything like that.

(Yeah. No there's nothing left there anymore. Well there's just not very many people left anymore.)

There sure ain't. There ain't none down in these hills.

NAMES OF SOME OF FAMILIES LIVING NOW

(Yeah. How many Indians are still living in the hills? Just--let's see, you and Carpenters. And who else?)

Whites down there.

(Whites.)

Yeah.

(Yeah.)

And then that house where Carpenter lived, his sister-in-law lives there.

(Yeah.)

Then on down the road--

(What's her name now?)

Her name is Annuly now. Her last name now.

(Annuly.)

Annuly. If they didn't--if they're not divorced. I don't know they been kind of on the outs a long while.

(Yeah.)

Well but before that she was married to one of these here Daughtery's. Name's on tombstones down there.

(Are any Daughtery's still living?)
