

(Yeah. I'd like to see it...)

Well, let's go.

(Let me ask you this one more question and this is about that man, Johnson. What did he look like? Could you just sort of describe his appearance?)

Well, he must have been about six feet tall. I judge that--little over, a few inches. And he wore big broad brim hat and he wear a six shooter all the time. And wore boots like a cowboy. And he weigh, maybe, in neighborhood, maybe of 175 pounds. He wasn't too big a man, but he was tall.

(Now was he connected with these Daltons?)

Well, he must be their boss--or, I don't know who he was--he run the headquarters where they came in to pick up their supplies and rations. They'd bring in all the loot.

(Now was this the same gang that later killed Inkanish?)

Well, I didn't say Johnson did, but...

(I mean the gang.)

We don't know. After Johnson moved and that was before the country opened up, we don't know where they been running round. But happened after the country opened, when Inkanish got killed.

So we don't know whether it's the same bunch or not. But they had been roaming in this county here, as far as Hobart and in through here. And in the Wichita Mountains. They got caves in there.

They hide out.

OUTLAW LOOT BURIED IN MOUNTAINS

Not too long ago they found some loot back of Mt. Sheridan over there. Some found buried treasure over there--gold. And these outlaws--one of them came back hunting some of this loot. From St. Louis. Him and his granddaughter and husband in a Rolls Royce car. And they picked me up and we tried to find where it is, but
