

Yeah.

(Do you remember that one? What kind of place was it?)

Well it was a big school, a good size school. There was a two story building and ah--

(How many folks did they have there? How many pupil er students went there?)

Oh, I don't know there must of had couple hundred maybe, a whole lot of them.

You remember, don't you remember that building?

(No.)

You know where Grandad Young lived. (words not clear) We lived out there on, well you know where Downing street is?

(Yeah. I know where that is.)

Well my grandfather lived right on that street, right up on top of the hill, off main, there in Muskogee area. That was their place and we lived same place right on the same block. Just right north of it. And I, there's a little old school house up there close to, well its northeast of that. They called it the Dogtown School House.

(Dog town?)

I went to school there. Old lady Bushyhead. You remember her? Then Bud Wiley's wife, she taught there for awhile. Went there awhile, then went to Baptist Mission.

(Fred Wiley's wife was a teacher too?)

JACK LUTHER, NEGRO, PEDDLED SPRING WATER FOR TEN CENTS PER BARREL

Yeah. Old Doctor Fite, you remember Doctor Fite?

(Yeah. He had a pretty place up there, didn't he? Round up northwest from the main part of town. Awful pretty place.)

And you know, out there on campus was a big spring. They had it all covered up.

(Yeah, that was an awful good spring there. Course they had a pump there,
