March 25, 1969.

Index side B, recording time 35 minutes.

Informant:

Mrs. Clara Ward Robinson, 80-year-old Cherokee, Bushyhead, Rogers County, Oklahoma

Subject:

Mrs. Robinson was born and raised in the Bushynead community of northern Rogers County, and this has always been her nome. Her parents were Bryon James Robinson and Wether Ward. Her maternal grandparents were of the Ward family in Georgia, and at one time had been with the Texas Cherokees. They were forced out of Texas and settled for a while near Siloam Springs, whansas, and later at Flint, I.T. After a while her grandfather, Joseph Ward, settled about two miles south of Bushynead where he lived out his life. The old Ward's Grove School, and Wards Grove Cemetery were named after him.

Mrs. Robinson well knows this part of the old Cherokee Nation. She attended schools at Ward's Grove, Chelsea, Washington, and finally the Cherokee Female Seminary. She taught school for many years and also she and her husband operated hardware and implement stores in the district.

She talks of the old community centers surrounding her hometown. OOwala, Sequoyah, Foyil, Sageeyah, Good Hope,

A few miles southwest of Bushyhead was the community of Oswala, once a center of social life in pioneer days. The settlement Mad a school and a church. A Mr. Lipe operated a store there, she recalls. Ocwala came by its name thru Mr. Lips, who wanted the village given The nearest the Cherokees gould come to maing his an Indian name. name was with the word "light", which was acceptable and has been used these many years. The village was on the main read for travelers going west to the crossing on the Verdegris River some three or four miles west, and provided a stop over place. Sometime shout 1875 some travelers had stopped there with a sick child one night. The child died and was the first burial, in what is now the Ogwala Cemetery. Strip coal mining, ranches, and the invasion of whiten have erased most of this old community now, except possibly the commetery. Even then, coal miners want to move it. Strip mining has/nearly completely surrounded the burial ground, and the only access is a narrow road between two deep coal pits. At one time Cowala had a post office beginning about 4887, and she recalls hearing her felks mention that John Foreman, a Cherokee, was the first postmaster.

The town of Busnyhead probably had its beginning about 1882 when the Frisco railroad came thru. J. W. Stewart was one of the first to put in a store which was the beginning of the little town. The town grew and prospered until it had many stores and houses. Farming was done on a large scale, and lots of cattle were raised and shipped from the area. Like so many of the frontier towns, many lived to see it grow up and then die. The advent of paved roads and automobiles was the first of a series of events that started its decline. The period after World War I was one of hard times, unemployment, and no market for farm products. Farming in the area seached a low ebb from which it never recovered, and the country became one for cattle raising. Then came the strip coal mining beginning near the community of Sequeyan and going