Better Food—& Work

In total war, every citizen has got a job to do that’s important to help win the war. And to do the job right, a worker has got to have plenty of good food—particularly plenty of the right kind of food.

Milk is the basis for health-building diets because of its remarkable combination of necessary food elements that can be obtained better through milk than any other way.

That’s why workers should have plenty of milk. And the same thing applies to housewives—who are certainly workers in their own homes—and children who work just as hard at their play as adults do at their jobs. All need milk—and plenty of it!
