A survey of electric power rates shows the rates in OG&E-served communities to be lower than in 15 of the nation’s largest industrial cities. That means if industry is looking for cheap power, it will find it in Oklahoma and from a public utility which has proved its ability to serve adequately and dependably.