Well, that's not one at the table. A recent reader survey indicates that the typical member of the OU Alumni Association is quite attractive physically, well read, articulate, witty, has a good job, is happily married (or has been), is laudably self-reliant, a born leader, admired, loved and has good table manners. What we like most of all about him (and her), however, is the loyalty and interest he displays by his membership in the Association. The support which he gives his alma mater helps us represent him on the campus and to work toward making his University a better one. Practically every member is also a contributor to the Alumni Development Fund, and this facet of his support is essential to an improving school. We wish every alumnus 'alumna would ape our members.
