Where Do Great Ideas Come From?

From its beginnings this nation has been guided by great ideas. The men who hammered out the Constitution and the Bill of Rights were thinkers—men of vision—the best educated men of their day. And every major advance in our civilization since that time has come from minds equipped by education to create great ideas and put them into action.

So, at the very core of our progress is the college classroom. It is there that the imagination of young men and women gains the intellectual discipline that turns it to useful thinking. It is there that the great ideas of the future will be born.

That is why the present tasks of our colleges and universities are of vital concern to every American. These institutions are doing their utmost to raise their teaching standards, to meet the steadily rising pressure for enrollment, and provide the healthy educational climate in which great ideas may flourish. They need the help of all who love freedom, all who hope for continued progress in science, in statesmanship, in the better things of life.

If you want to know what the college crisis means to you, write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, N.Y.

These are but examples of the many accomplishments made possible by friends of the University through their generous gifts. There are many other examples which would perhaps be just as impressive and we hope there will be many more in the future.

The University of Oklahoma enjoys a unique position among educational institutions of the Southwest. Because of its stable and intelligent administration the University has been able to demonstrate a capacity for leadership that few institutions can match. President George L. Cross has held his position since 1944 and his administration has been unparalleled by any other institution in the region for the successful recognition and treatment of educational problems.

As a young institution, this University has vigor and a fresh approach to education that cannot be matched by many. We have the resourcefulness and leadership to innovate, experiment and pioneer; hence to set the standards of quality and service in education in the Southwest that vitalize its impact on our free society.

major movie studios are two other popular books by Oklahomans, The Reluctant Angel by Ellen Reaves Hall, and The River Witch by Marjorie McIntyre. Both authors studied in O. U.'s writing school.

When a movie producer and a television director each asked this writer to tell them seriously what it is that the O. U. creative writing school has that makes for its phenomenal success, the answer was easy. It has its founders, Dr. Walter S. Campbell and Professor Foster Harris, who not only have thoroughly mastered the craft of writing, but who understand so well what people like to read and editors wish to buy that they can say with assurance:

"We may not teach you how to write, but we'll teach you how to sell!"
