3 BACK TO THE CLASSROOM
Years of classroom experience and devotion to the University make the emeritus professors too valuable a resource to be lost. Faced with rising enrollments and a faculty shortage, President David Boren turned to his friends.

8 ART, FILM AND VIDEOTAPE
Knowing that many of their colleagues did not share their belief in film study as a legitimate scholarly pursuit, an intrepid band of OU academics dedicated years to crafting a respected—and popular—interdisciplinary program.

14 LIFE DOESN'T GET ANY BETTER
Critics praise his illustrations, likening them to Norman Rockwell's best; his commissions will keep him at his easel for years; his starving artist days are only a memory. Yet Mike Wimmer's favorite paintings were done for free.

21 CAPITAL PUNISHMENT
Moral issues aside, proponents of the death penalty argue against the high cost of lifetime imprisonment for capital criminals. University law professor Randall Coyne ran the figures and came to some surprising conclusions.

26 A RITE OF PASSAGE
The seventh in OU historian David Levy's series, "Treasures from the Archives," explores "Rules Governing Freshmen, 1932," offering a glimpse of a simpler but not necessarily a gentler time of new student orientation.

28 THE JOURNEY OF HOPE
Danish triathlete Peter Rasmussen, who came to OU via a very special international scholarship program, spent the summer of his lifetime crossing the United States by bicycle to assist the disabled children of his host country.
