THE MAGNIFICENT SEVENTH
Here's one for your alumni scrapbook: Bob Stoops' troops run the table on their gridiron opponents to bring home National Championship No. 7. Ah, yes, Sooner Magic is back with a season to remember.

A STADIUM FOR OKLAHOMA
The towering concrete monster that dominates the Norman campus skyline is a shrine to college football. Now one more chapter is being added to the colorful history of Oklahoma Memorial Stadium.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS
The $115 million Campaign for Sooner Sports has something for student athletes in all 20 intercollegiate sports—from a Lloyd Noble Center makeover, to practice, living, dining, and study facilities.

CLARA'S GIFT
The brief exhibition was just a teaser, an indication of things to come, a chance for more than 33,000 museum goers to view the $50 million French Impressionist collection bequeathed by an old friend.

DARING YOUNG MAN IN HIS FLYING MACHINE
Adventurer Robert Ragozzino, who literally grew up at OU's Max Westheimer Field, set out in June from Wiley Post Airport to do what no one had done before—fly solo around the world in a rebuilt Stearman biplane.

ON THE COVER
The Sears Trophy, symbolic of the 2000 NCAA National Championship, has come home to Oklahoma to rest among six other testaments to the Sooners' place in intercollegiate football history—1950, 1955, 1956, 1974, 1975, 1985. The glittering crystal treasure joins the Orange Bowl Trophy, from the 13-2 victory over Florida State that clinched the national title, and the Big 12 Trophy, bestowed for the 27-24 besting of Kansas State in the conference championship game, and other recognitions for coaches and players of this remarkable team. See Page 4.