The architect's conception of the Model Courtroom indicates advantages the Model Courtroom would have for students' presentation of practice cases.

Campaign Needs Final Push

The University's College of Law needs a Model Courtroom, and with the aid of alumni, the drive to build a Model Courtroom for the University's College of Law is entering its final and most important phase. More than two-thirds of the total cost of $35,000 has been raised in gifts or pledges as of March 15. To help put the drive over the top, the Oklahoma Bar Foundation and the Law School Association are inviting alumni of the University, whether they are graduates of the College of Law or not, to contribute.

The Model Courtroom project resulted from a feeling among lawyers that the atmosphere of dignity and respect due the courts and the profession was difficult, if not impossible, to maintain in the present worn-out and antiquated facilities. The present quarters of the courtroom (above) were constructed in 1914 and have had no major repair work since that time.

The proposed new courtroom will serve the practical purpose of enabling the College of Law to broaden its program of bringing actual trials and demonstrations to the College for the benefit of students and of the profession.

Contributors to the Model Courtroom will have their names inscribed on a Scroll of Honor which will be placed permanently at the entrance of the room.

You are urged to help put the Model Courtroom drive over the top. Send your contribution to the University of Oklahoma Foundation, University of Oklahoma, today.

The man who has a telephone at his elbow in the office appreciates the same convenience in his home.

He knows that running down-stairs or from room to room to telephone is an unnecessary waste of time and energy . . . when additional telephones, conveniently placed, cost so little.

Great thing for Mother, too. For telephones in the kitchen and bedroom will save her many steps. And give her greater peace of mind, especially at night when she may be at home alone.

All of this convenience—and safety too—can be yours at small cost for each additional telephone. Just call the business office of your local Bell telephone company.
