THE AGGIE DINNER

The University of Oklahoma Association executive board was host November 23 to the board of the Oklahoma Agricultural & Mechanical College Former Students association at a dinner in the card room of the Oklahoma Union buildings. Practically all board members were in attendance.

"This is a happy idea," declared President Melton of the Aggie board. "We hope it will become an annual custom. We have only one regret—that the idea was not our own. Nothing can do more to promote a friendlier relation between the two schools than a dinner like this, where alumni of both institutions can gather around one table and discuss their mutual problems. After all, the problems our school faces are akin to those your university faces. We can profit by your experience, and we can share our experience with you."

President Tolbert welcomed the Aggie board to Soonerland. He outlined the steps that had been taken to revive the University of Oklahoma Association and told of the Life Membership plan. President Melton remarked that the Aggies had not yet planned on life memberships, although the matter had been under consideration. President Tolbert complimented the Aggies on their new magazine, which made its first appearance this School year. Vice-President Savage of the Aggie board also spoke for the Aggies, expressing their warm appreciation of the dinner and the friendly motives actuating it.

Attending the meeting in her official capacity as an Aggie board member was Mrs Raymond Tolbert, wife of the Sooner association president.

A few years ago welding was introduced to the world. For a time this art was looked upon as impractical. Today, however, it is considered a necessity. Thousands of plants use it for maintenance work while others find it a great saving in manufacturing their product.

LYNN RIGGS' SEASON

Lynn Riggs, ex '23, is soon to have a "season" in New York. This term does not imply the production of merely one play but one of those phenomenal runs of luck which have recently made Walter Winchell and J. P. McEvoy two of the best known names of the theater business. Winchell as dramatic critic, late of the Graphic, now of the Daily News, overnight was publishing articles in high-hat Vanity Fair and being quoted in every corner of Broadway. McEvoy's Show Girl has appeared as a best seller, a play and a movie and has made him a headliner among magazine names.

Such a season is now in the offing for Lynn Riggs, who has signed a contract with the Theatre Guild for the production of one of his plays, is soon to have a volume of poems published, has a play included in a forthcoming volume of one act plays, and is dramatizing a novel for early production.

Foremost among these events, both because it represents the highest recognition of the theatrical world and Lynn Riggs's greatest ambition, is the play to be produced by the Theatre Guild. It is titled Green Grow the Lilacs, which has been sorely needed in New York. Librettist Eugene O'Neil, Paul Green and E. P. Conkle. The publisher is D. C. Heath and Co.

The Son of Perdition by Jane Gould Cozzens is the novel which he recently contracted to dramatize.

Added to this list of accomplishments comes splendid praise from Sydney Howard of Broadway. Said Mr Howard in a recent interview in The New York Telegraph, "There are only two playwrights that I can think of at the moment who are bringing any freshness and vitality to the stage. They are Preston Sturges, author of Strictly Dishonorable, and Lynn Riggs, who has had several plays published and who has just had one accepted by the Theatre Guild."

the head, "Champ Clark Will Address Student Body" and sent it in to "Sammy" Crawford to set up. The next day the great speaker's name appeared as "Chump Clark." He appeared at the Transcript office and with great rage told Mr Meacham that he was "the first newspaper man who ever called me a 'Chump'."

SAMUEL S. CRAWFORD is best known to his friends and associates as "Sam" and ranks with Bennie Owen and other veterans in his twenty years of service to the university. He set his first type when he was fourteen years old on the Industrial Advocate at Augusta, Kansas. Mr Meacham was the editor.

Later when Mr Crawford came to work on the Norman Transcript, soon after the run of '89, he told Ed P. Ingle, owner of the Transcript, of Mr Meacham's ability and the latter was summoned as foreman
