LYNN RIGGS’ SEASON

Lynn Riggs, ex '23, is soon to have a “season” in New York. This term does not imply the production of merely one show but one of those phenomenal runs of luck which have recently made Walter Winchell and J. P. McEvoy two of the best known names of the theater business. Winchell as dramatic critic, late of the Graphic, now of the Daily News, overnight was publishing articles in high-bait Vanity Fair and being quoted in every corner of Broadway. McEvoy’s Show Girl has appeared as a best seller, a play and a movie and has made him a headliner among magazine names.

Such a season is now in the offering for Lynn Riggs, who has signed a contract with the Theatre Guild for the production of one of his plays, is soon to have a volume of poems published, has a play included in a forthcoming volume of one act plays, and is dramatizing a novel for early production.

Foremost among these events, both because it represents the highest recognition of the theatrical world and Lynn Riggs’s greatest ambition, is the play to be produced by the Theatre Guild. It is titled Green Grows the Little, titled from a folksong of the nineteenth century, and written while Riggs was traveling in Europe on a Guggenheim fellowship.

The Iron Dish is the title of the book of poems which is soon to be published by Doubleday-Doran, either in the spring or next fall.

Knives from Syria is the play which is to be included in a volume of one act plays edited by Barrett H. Clark and Thomas R. Cook. This volume will contain also plays by Eugene O'Neill, Paul Green and E. P. Conklee. The publisher is D. C. Heath and Co.

The Son of Perdition by Jane Gould Cozzens is the novel which he recently contracted to dramatize.

Added to this list of accomplishments comes splendid praise from Sydney Howard of Broadway, Said Mr Howard in a recent interview in The New York Telegram, “There are only two playwrights that I can think of at the moment who are bringing any freshness and vitality to the stage. They are Preston Sturges, author of Strictly Dishonorable, and Lynn Riggs, who has had several plays published and who has just had one accepted by the Theatre Guild.”

TWO DECADES OF PRINTING

SAMUEL S. CRAWFORD is best known to his friends and associates as "Sam" and ranks with Bennie Owen and other veterans in his twenty years of service to the university. He set his first type when he was fourteen years old on the Industrial Advocate at Augusta, Kansas. Mr Meachem was the editor.

Later when Mr Crawford came to work on the Norman Transcript, soon after the run of '89, he told Ed P. Ingle, owner of the Transcript, of Mr Meachem’s ability and the latter was summoned as foreman.
