is next to the lowest. The average salary for full professors at the University of Oklahoma is approximately $1,000 less than the average for full professors in three other leading Big Seven institutions.

Salary averages for professors in Big Ten institutions run from $1,600 to $4,100 higher than O. U. A 1955 faculty salary survey of 18 state universities and land-grant colleges in Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Ohio, Texas, Wisconsin and Missouri shows the University of Oklahoma ranking fifteenth in average salary rate for full professors, and seventeenth for associate professors.

The University of Oklahoma has the largest enrollment in the Big Seven and the smallest budget for current operations. The basic per student cost at the University (eliminating extension and research) is more than $200 below the Big Seven average of $779.

The University of Oklahoma should not continue to accept increasing numbers of students unless additional construction and operational funds are made available. Such a course during the next few years would result in an institution of less than second class quality.

If adequate funds cannot be available to develop and operate the institution, steps should be taken to select in some orderly way the limited number of students that can be accepted. Perhaps a state-wide system of testing and counseling should be developed in the high schools with the objective of advising students as to where they could attend college in Oklahoma most effectively.

Such a program should not be thought of as one in which students would be told where they may go to college; the purpose would be merely to advise them. There should be many instances where certain high school graduates might as well attend one of the junior colleges for two years, or possibly take their entire program at one of the four-year colleges.

This state-wide testing and counseling program might well be developed and administered by the State Regents for Higher Education. It could not, of course, be a project of any one institution of higher learning in Oklahoma.

Last fall between five and six hundred freshmen who came to the University of Oklahoma to enroll found sections in English, chemistry and mathematics filled completely. Many of these youngsters went elsewhere. Under these circumstances, it is almost certain that several were turned away who should be in the University for the best interests of the state.

Cushing Club Rates Salute

Under the direction of A. B. Imel, '46ba, and other club leaders, Cushing staged a fine membership drive and memorable banquet.

On the night of February 24, more than 80 people gathered in Cushing to end a two-week campaign, and to enjoy a family dinner. In a community where active membership in the University of Oklahoma Alumni Association was already high, campaign committee members sold 22 annual memberships and 4 lifetime memberships. The result, Cushing now has 80 active alumni members and 4 lifetime members.

Presentation of life membership certificates was made at the banquet. The program included brief talks by footballers Buddy Leake and Carl Allison and a showing of the O.U. Album film. In a brief business session, new officers were elected (see above).

The Sooner Magazine salutes the Cushing alumni for their enthusiasm for their alma mater and the fine display of Sooner Spirit that was present at their meeting.

KATHY asked Bill for a date Saturday night. No, she wasn't being forward; it was Now or Never Week and the girls were supposed to exchange places with the men. Kathy had been planning the date all week. She and the places with the men. Kathy had been planning the date all week. She and the other girls had been finding that it wasn't so easy to get a car, organize a party or decide how to show their dates a good time.

Finally, Saturday arrived and Kathy went over to Bill's house to pick him up. She felt a little embarrassed as she peeked in the door to see if any other girls were there. Seeing two other girls waiting on their dates, she braced and walked in.

Kathy tried to make a scene in case any other girls were around. She was looking for a social advantage when her date arrived. After all, this was a good opportunity to show her how it feels when he has to wait for ten minutes of final primping. Now it was Bill's turn to be embarrassed. Kathy dutifully helped him on with his coat and opened the door for him. All the other boys in the house gathered around to laugh at his awkwardness.

The sillyness of the thing was worth- while to Bill, however. She was paying all the checks. Kathy took him to dinner and stumbled through the ordering; took him to the movie and forgot to buy the tickets. Then, she took him home, exhausted from all the responsibility.

Although the men were having an easy week on their wallets, the girls were getting most of the breaks. This was the girl's chance to show that boy in her English class that she really liked him and would like to date him. Of course, girls don't really need to ask boys for dates—if they are smart. The proper approach, a smile, the right words or a meaningful glance can usually turn the trick. But some guys can't take a hint.

The men got an education. They learned what it is like to sit by the telephone, waiting for a call from a girl asking for a date. And the unlucky ones found out how exciting a Saturday night at home is. It was fun for a whole, but everyone was relieved when Now or Never Week (March 4-11) was over and things were back to normal.

The 1955 Sooners, Scandal, March 10-11, were acclaimed by many as the "best ever." The organized houses had been practicing for weeks before their performances and costumes and paint for the O.U. extravaganza. Several of the acts approached professional perfection, with intricate dances and excellent music.

Delta Delta Delta sorority was top winner in the women's division with an act entitled "Mother Goose Rhymes in Modern Times." Winner of the men's division was Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. The ATO "Interlude of Magic" included baton-twirling, juggling, a clown routine and a disappearing rabbit.

Kappa Sigma fraternity and Gwen Massengale, Woodward, won the special act division with their "Up-to-Date Grand Opera." George Chaney, Oklahoma City, and Valjean Johns, Shattuck, were judged winners of the small acts division for their duet-piano performance.

And winner of the single act division was Gwen Drennan, Oklahoma City. Miss Drennan did a three-part ballet solo.

The 1955 Leutzeier medals were presented by President Cross at the annual BMOC-BWOC banquet held March 1. The Leutzeier medals are awarded to graduating seniors with outstanding records in scholarship, extracurricular activities and service to the University.

Mrs. Marjorie Peterson Mosburg, Ponca City, and William J. Kennedy, Norman, were awarded the gold medals. Silver medals were awarded to Joan Wakefield, Tulsa, and Jack Jennings, Lookokee. Ann West Elms, Antlers, and Albert J. Alschuler, Lubbock, Texas, were bronze award winners.
