knows the shuffle offense backwards, sideways and inside out. The same thing can be said for Owens as was said about Norton in respect to the team spirit angle. Though barely topping six feet, Radar takes more than his share of rebounds and is a ball of controlled fury all over the court.

Mention of Grossman automatically brings a comparison with Paul Merchant, the past master of play-making. It is the contemplation of this observer, be it heresy or not, that the "Ox," as the 5-10 junior from the sidewalks of New York is affectionately called, will make a place for himself in Sooner memory on a par at least with the undeniably brilliant Merchant. The diminutive ball hawk is the crowd's delight with his spectacular passing and guarding. Not an outstanding shotmaker, he'll take the six or eight good opportunities offered each night and hit half of them. But it's in the ball-handling department that Stan excels.

The supporting cast of Jim Terrell, Johnny "Motor" Rogers, Doug Lynn and Soufly Turner are capable reserves. Rogers shows promise of breaking into the starting lineup at any time. The Centralia, Illinois, education senior is almost too fast. He can dribble downright as fast as the ordinary player can run. But Rogers has a tendency to be erratic, and a little stability is needed before he can move to that coveted starting role. Terrell, also a June grad, is the most accurate jump and push shooter of the squad that presages victory. He can be counted on for help, along with Lynn, a 1948 and 1949 letterman who is an aggressive rebounder and three inches shorter than Freiberger. Turner, senior letterman from Purcell, is a capable floorman and excellent setshooter.

Beyond those nine, prospects are somewhat dim. Last year's freshman squad was anemic, although Sandy Borofsky, Tom Churchill, Bill Cummins, Jack Angel and Norm Fleshman show promise and will bear watching. It would be senseless to base predictions for a banner year on material alone; other conference squads hold an edge in that department. But there's an intangible quality present in the current squad that presages victory.

Call it spirit, hustle or will to win—it's there. It's the factor that upssets the dope chart. The Sooners have it. A youthful squad—15 of the 19 squadmen are 21 or younger—they have an intense desire to win. Part of this flame has been kindled by Drake, as vital and enthusiastic a man now as in his playing days at Oklahoma in 1926-29 when he was All-American in basketball and tops in track and football. His players want to win for him, they believe in the shuffle offense (an all-important factor), and they have the verve of youth that hates to lose. Moreover, there is an undercurrent of desire to win to show Sooner fans that they're missing something by not watching them, for crowds have been at an all-time low in 1950.

So the writer is inclined to go along with the Big Red of the hardwoods. They are alert, sound ballplayers. They possess an indefatigable spirit that spells victory. They have an effective if exacting offense. Their coach is a tolerant perfectionist whose teams have won or tied for the Big Seven title six times in the 12 years he has coached, have been first or second nine times in a notoriously tough league from top to bottom.

Predictions would be much simpler had the writer not seen the Sooners in their first three starts. Irresistible Shocky Needly, Drake's sharp-tongued and peripherally satirical assistant, premonitioned four losses in the first six games, already an impossibility. "We'll be lucky to score," insisted the Shockoer with a straight face.

But the Sooners dropped a fine S.M.U. team, 47-39 in the opener, and made the Mustangs look highschoolish in losing. And S.M.U. rated one of the top teams in the Southwest, pushed a St. Johns team to the limit before losing a two-pointer. The Drakemen were even more impressive in tripping Jack Gray's Texas Longhorns, 50-35, and Minnesota, 66-45, showing smoother ball-handling and fewer errors than in the S.M.U. encounter.

It might be dangerous to forecast a successful season on the basis of early season victories. Little things win and lose ball games. Big tests coming in December are a return bout with Minnesota and CCNY. Big tests coming in December are a return bout with Minnesota and CCNY. If the 1952 harvest season will not only produce a bumper crop, but yield a veritable victory garden.

Sooner Portraits . . .

Following graduation from the University he joined the family bank in Clinton as assistant cashier. In 1941 he joined the National Bank examiners' force. Although he considered it an excellent experience, commercial banking was what really interested Arch. So he went to Wichita, Kansas, in 1943 as cashier of the Southwestern National Bank. In 1945 he moved to the Union National Bank in Kansas City, Missouri. And in 1947 he was elected vice president of the Union Bank, becoming one of the youngest men in the country to hold a senior officer position in a large metropolitan bank.

Arch Wheeler likes people and he has a tremendous amount of energy which directs toward promoting a better relationship between bankers and their customers. Since becoming head of the correspondent banking department of the Kansas City Bank, he has been busy calling on bankers and commercial customers throughout the southwest. This broad acquaintance has been another of the reasons why he has held many important positions in the city and state banking associations.

In 1943 he was married to the former Lucille Alewine, '50bs. They make their home in Kansas City.

Arch is making plans for a large Kansas City Alumni luncheon this spring. He was informed by his predecessor, Richard T. (Dick) Pendleton, '26law, that if the Sooners didn't have a football team during the 1953 season, he would be able to serve the luncheon on a bridge table. If football scores will raise the Sooner Alumni spirit, Arch may have to reserve Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium.
