The skeleton of a man who roamed the Oklahoma plains about 1,200 years ago bowed low as he welcomed the visitors to the new University Anthropology Museum in the basement of Morrill Hall, next door to the government department. Glimming grotesquely, this very Early Sooner first exhibited the showcases of pipes, axes, and baskets from Caddo, Choctaw, Seminole, and Choctaw tribes.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried added a homely touch to this cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

THE SKELETON of a man who roamed the Oklahoma plains about 1,200 years ago bowed low as he welcomed the visitors to the new University Anthropology Museum in the basement of Morrill Hall, next door to the government department. Glimming grotesquely, this very Early Sooner first exhibited the showcases of pipes, axes, and baskets from Caddo, Choctaw, Seminole, and Choctaw tribes.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.

He thrilled a few notes on a Caddo flute as we passed the cases of Indian costumes, jewelry and other objects, valued at $15,000. The papoose cradle in which five of Osage Chief Bacon Rind's children were carried, adds a homey touch to this cradle. From Colombia, South America.