Three separate buildings comprise the ultramodern complex presently under construction on the campus by Manhattan (see Sooner Magazine, Jan., page 5). New Towers Number One will be opened to 1,538 students in the fall. Towers Cafeteria.

The beautiful Drama Building, the first construction in the proposed Fine Arts Center, was completed by Manhattan Construction Company in August, 1965, and dedicated during the University’s 75th anniversary observance. From exterior to interior, including the Rupel J. Jones Theatre, this magnificent structure is a showplace on the campus.

Towers Number Two, accommodating an additional 1,538 students, is scheduled for occupancy a year later. A cafeteria, providing service for these 3,096 students, will be central to the 12-story units.
