Roundup of Campus News

President Cross held his first President's Hour and discussed student aggravations; Marilyn Monroe's marriage brought gloom.

Except for the weather, which vacillated between snow and shirt sleeves, the past month on campus was rather routine: examinations came and were finished and a new semester was started.

In front of this quiet backdrop however a flurry of student opinion appeared at what is to be a series of President's Hours, in which Dr. Cross meets with students to hear their views of conditions at the University.

At this first session, some 40 students appeared, taking up such subjects as complaints of the food served in Cross Center cafeteria and of the controversial parking issue.

Explaining that no mass-produced food for long would hold up well in comparison with the home variety freshmen were used to, and adding that he would spot-check meals once each week, Dr. Cross then answered a number of complaints about the automobile parking fines.

At the start of the new semester, a ruling went into effect under which students are required to pay parking meter fines within 48 hours or have $1 a day attached to their usual 25-cent fee for each of seven days. If the students then fail to take care of their fines by the end of the week, they are subject to suspension until it is straightened out.

In answer to comments about the currently unpopular rule, Dr. Cross said the $1 a day might be a "little excessive." Thus far, at least six students have been suspended from school in connection with parking fines.

Another major topic around the tables these days is the popular one of coffee prices. The Student Union Cafeteria, eying its rising coffee bill, upped the cost of the old five-cent cup to six cents. The Student Senate thereupon passed a resolution calling for observances of a "Tea on Tuesday" movement, asking its followers to order tea or soft drinks. At its first trial, coffee consumption dropped, but not appreciably.

On a lighter side, the 48 men and six women of the Glee Club flew to New York to appear on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town television program, including in their trip two days of sight-seeing and a visit to the Fred Waring Show.

And still more light, with the marriage of the movies' Marilyn Monroe to baseball's Joe DiMaggio, one student in college fashion wrote the Oklahoma Daily offering his life as a sacrifice in mourning for the loss from hopeful availability of the current motion picture pin-up queen.

But there were campus queens to soothe the aching heart. Arda Penny, Oklahoma City freshman, was elected honorary wing commander of the Air Force ROTC unit. Her princesses are Carolyln Carney, Atoka; Begie McCall, Sherman, Texas; Joan Gentry, Enid, and Pat Baily, Oklahoma City.

Jeanne Munday, freshman from Putnam City, was named honorary captain of Peshing Rifles, fraternal organization for basic Air Force and Army ROTC cadets. Also, Phyllis Hahn, business sophomore from Blackwell, received the honor of representing O.U. in the annual Oklahoma Federation of Young Republican's sweetheart contest.

Among the other highlights of a month of campus life was the announcement that Dr. Laurence H. Snyder, dean of the graduate college, had been named honorary national president of Phi Sigma, international biological honor society . . . Sectioning during Spring semester enrolment was held in the Union Ballroom and was speeded up . . . Kuyk Logan, journalism junior from Norman, took over as editor of the Oklahoma Daily . . . And it was announced that construction of the $200,000 Fred Jones, Jr., Memorial Chapel is to start in February.

Jack Allen Morgan, '48eng, is now working as a computer specialist at Oklahoma City is this the first President's Hour and discussed student aggravations; Marilyn Monroe’s marriage brought gloom.

Death Took No Holiday

Four outstanding women—all long associated with the University of Oklahoma—died in December and January.

Four prominent women, all close friends of the University, died in recent months. Three were of veteran teachers died of illnesses and an outstanding alumna was killed in an automobile accident. Here are brief accounts of their lives:

Mrs. A. J. Williams, wife of Dr. A. J. Williams, professor emeritus of geology, died December 5 after she and her husband had traveled to the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, for an examination.

She became ill in a hotel near the Mayo Clinic and died three days later of a paralytic stroke.

Born Oct. 27, 1878 in northeastern Illinois, Mrs. Williams was the daughter of a minister. After she and Dr. Williams came to Norman 40 years ago, she took an active part in civic projects and was one of the leading civic workers in the city.

She was a member of a group that initiated the garden club movement in the state, becoming the first president of the Oklahoma Association of Garden Clubs. Since Pearl Harbor and until shortly before her death, Mrs. Williams gave eight hours of daily volunteer work at the local Red Cross production headquarters. During the war she devoted 4,500 hours to the Red Cross.

In honor of her achievements, which also included being a leader in campaigning for the Norman Public Library, she was named twice the city’s “Woman of the Year.”

Mrs. Roy Temple House, wife of Dr. Roy Temple House, David Ross Boyd professor emeritus of modern languages, died December 12 in Norman.

Born at Dodge City, Iowa, she was married to Dr. House in 1907, and four years later came with him to Norman, where he became a professor of modern languages. Before making her home in Norman, Mrs. House taught art at Southwestern State College at Weatherford.

Mrs. House was a member of the Woden Club and had belonged to the Norman Garden Club. She was a member of the Christian Science Church where she was a reader.

Mrs. Neil R. Johnson, 59, ‘16ba, active alumna and another of four daughters, all University of Oklahoma graduates, was killed January 13 in an auto accident near Denton, Texas.

The Johnsons, who were returning from the Orange Bowl game in Miami, followed a truck onto a bridge outside Denton. The truck skidded, and in attempting to avert an accident, the Johnsons’ car hit the bridge, hurling both out of the auto. Mrs. Johnson was killed almost instantly, while her husband, prominent Cleveland County rancher and longtime member of the Athletic Council, was uninjured except for slight forehead cuts.

At Oklahoma, Mrs. Johnson, the former Florence Wagner, was the school’s first May Queen. Continuing Alumni Association work while her daughters were in school, she attended all 1916 class reunions.

She was a member of Pi Beta Phi, social sorority, and after being graduated, taught for some time at Keifer, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Charlie E. Decker, 89, wife of Dr. C. E. Decker, professor emeritus of Geology, died January 31 after a two-week illness. She had been ill health the past two years after receiving a hip injury.

Her husband, only immediate survivor, is a nationally known paleontologist and famed as an outstanding authority of graptolites.

She was a student of flowers and gardening. She was instrumental in Dr. Decker becoming interested in Iris culture and hybridizing, for which he has gained considerable recognition.

She was a charter member of the Norman Garden Club and Wabunaki, oldest of the faculty groups on campus. Mrs. Decker also reviewed many books. She was a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, teachers’ sorority, and Coterie, oldest federation of women’s clubs in Oklahoma, and of the faculty club.
