Medical School Notes

H. Glenn Gardiner, '33bs, '35med, has moved to 925 South Holman Ave., Chicago. He is associated with Sears, Roebuck and Co. as medical director.

William D. Curtis, '46med, was a recent visitor at the Medical School. Following his internship at Evangelical Hospital, Detroit, he has remained in Detroit where he is engaged in general practice.

The Oklahoma City Clinic recently announced the association of Robert P. Holt, '41bs, '44med, in orthopedic surgery, and James G. Gable, Jr., '40bs, '42med, in internal medicine.

The following members of the class of 1947 have recently become associated with the University of Oklahoma School of Medicine: Tom Sid Gafford, Jr., '47med, fellow in pathology; J. D. Cone, '47med, fellow in anatomy; Jess Miller, '47med, fellow in biochemistry; and Fred Redmond, '47med, fellow in pharmacology.

Easterner Praises Wilkinson

Editor's note: Here at the University we think Bud Wilkinson, head football coach, is tops. Everybody knows that. Therefore, we're sort of proud of an article appearing on the sports page of The Boston Sunday Globe in early August. Bud was in Boston to extend a charter to the Boston Alumni Club. The story of the Boston charter event will appear in the September issue of Sooner. Here's the story by Vera Miller appearing in the Globe.

"The most sought-after young football coach in the nation today is Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma.""Last winter Charles 'Bud' Wilkinson of Oklahoma was approached by Yale, Harvard and Navy. The earnest, modest young man who coached his Big Six team to a championship tie last year considered his job at Oklahoma more important than the gridiron glamour positions in the East."

"In a profession where shifts are frequent and objectives opportunistic, Wilkinson said yesterday he owes a debt to Oklahoma and besides had a deep feeling for the college. That's why he refused to budge when lucrative offers popped up, he said."

"Wilkinson yesterday visited the home of an Oklahoma alumnus, Tully Nortelnet, staff writer of the Christian Science Monitor, at 89 Ridge Road, Waban."

"He was returning from Springfield where he had been teaching a Y.M.C.A. course in physical culture."

"Wilkinson is a tall, youngish man. He played guard and quarterback for three of Minnesota's Big Ten champs back in '34, '35 and '36. Those famed powerhouse teams of Bernie Bierman ran from the state regents for higher education have approved of Cross' proposals for modernizing the school and its hospitals. Addition changes to be made before the fall term begins include opening of new wards in the hospitals; establishment of teacher relationships with other hospitals, and revision of the school's curriculum.

Earl Warren, '36ba, '38law

ing shorthand in night school in Venezuela, became Spanish-English stenographer with the Gulf Oil Company in Maracaibo, in their legal department. It was this job that got him interested in the study of law.

Regents Appoint Med Chairmen

Appointment of nine chairmen in the University School of Medicine has been approved by the Board of Regents.

Dr. A. N. Taylor was appointed acting chairman of the department of physiology from July 1 to June 30, 1949. Chairmen, whose appointments are effective from July 1 to June 30, 1950, are Dr. C. P. Bondurant, '22bs, '24med, dermatology and syphilis; Dr. J. E. Bearden, J., '90s, '21med, obstetrics; Dr. Clark H. Hall, pediatrics; Dr. Basil A. Hayes, urology; Dr. James P. McGee, ophthalmology, and Dr. Grider Penick, gynecology.

Dr. Howard A. Bennett was named chairman of the department of anesthesiology, retroactive to March 15, 1948, until June 30, 1950, and Dr. H. E. Dondia, vice-chairman of anesthesiology, retroactive March 15, 1948, to June 30, 1950.

Dr. Byron Fremont Smith, '43bs, '45med, was appointed director of health service, assistant director of the out-patient department and clinical assistant of the department of medicine.

Mrs. Mary R. Caron, director of the school of nursing, was given the title of professor of nursing, retroactive to February 13, the date of her original appointment.

Medical School is Accredited

"Unqualified accreditation" was awarded the University School of Medicine in Oklahoma City last July by the Council of Medical Education. According to the report given to the Board of Regents by Dr. Mark R. Everett, medical school dean, the school for 12 years had been placed on "confidential probation" by the North Central Association of Colleges and Universities.

Representatives of the Council of Medical Education inspected the school and its hospitals the last March to determine improvements made since the previous survey and to recommend changes, George L. Cross, president of the University, said.

Everett stated that the recent reorganization of the school as recommended by Cross had received support from all interested agencies and from alumni. He said the University regents and the state regents for higher education have approved of Cross' proposals for modernizing the school and its hospitals.

Additional changes to be made before the fall term begins include opening of new wards in the hospitals; establishment of teacher relationships with other hospitals, and revision of the school's curriculum.

Spect. The Midwest passes more than we (East) do. "There's a reason. We can count on dry, fast fields for every game. In the East, during the fall, it rains about a third of the time. That's why our football appears more open."

"The University of Oklahoma is in the small town of Norman, 18 miles from Oklahoma City. Wilkinson is noted as a coach who can handle material as it comes. He has mostly lads from his own state and a few that float up from the Texas Panhandle. This year his two outstanding players are linemen, guard Buddy Burris and tackle Wade Walker.

Dear Mr. Beard,

Seems like this correspondent always pops up in a different locale every time you hear from him. After leaving San Francisco last May, I flew cross country to Norfolk, Virginia—with short stopovers at St. Louis and Washington, D. C. I was in Virginia long enough to see some of the historic towns, such as Williamsburg, then shoved off with the U.S.S. Columbus—loaded with over 500 midshipmen from 12 colleges and universities,

Bryan Spends Travel Award

With a $250 check in his pocket, Lyman Bryan, '48ba, and his wife and baby took a fast train headed for Baltimore, early in August.

The occasion was the second annual Kayser Memorial Travel Award. Lyman won the award presented by J. W. Kayser, publisher of the Chickasha Star, and Mrs. Kayser, as the outstanding senior man in the School of Journalism.

He planned to spend the award studying trade journals and house organs, a phase of journalism that has attracted his interest for several months. His first stop was to be Baltimore, but many other cities figured in his proposed tour.

The award is a memorial to the Kayser's son, John Winston Kayser, '38journal, who was killed in action in France in 1944. Winners of the award are selected by a committee from the University and the state newspaper field on the basis of achievement in journalism and Christian leadership.

During the past several months, Lyman has been Associated Press correspondent for Norman and the University. He has also served as sports editor and issue editor of the Oklahoman Daily, student publication.

At the presentation of the award at a Sigma Delta Chi dinner, Robert V. Peterson, former visiting professor of journalism and now associate publisher of the Norman Transcript, addressed the group.

He told of the success of newspapermen who have attended or graduated from the University School of Journalism. While, as he pointed out, it is impossible to name them all, he named "a few that I think of offhand. They are:"

No Homesickness This Fall!

Freshman women students at the University this fall won't need to worry about that homesick feeling. They'll easily get acquainted with campus life through the help of upperclass coed counselors.

New campus arrivals will be introduced to scholastic, social and activity standards by approximately 150 coed counselors appointed by the Associated Women Students group. Girls coming from high schools and other colleges will be welcomed by upperclass Sooner women, who will point the way to good grades, club and association membership and campus friends.

Lunsford to Assume Command

Robert L. Lunsford, III, '43ba, is to take over command of the campus American Legion Post 303 in September. Lunsford, who is now a senior in the law school, has been active in campus affairs since entering the University in the fall of 1938.

His record for leadership is both impressive and long. A native of Oklahoma, Lunsford lettered both in football and track and became state champion in the high hurdles. At Cleveland High School, he served as president of the Student Council and the student body. He belonged to such organizations as the debate club, the band, the glee club, and was a member of the yearbook staff. Other high school honors accorded him were membership in the honor society and the position of Master Counselor for both the local and district Demolay chapter.
