The prominent actors in this play (The Rivals) deserted the stage almost as soon as they had completed their piece. Some of the prominent actors who still reside in Norman are:

THE SOONER MAGAZINE

A Builder of the University
Dean Gittinger Has High Place in Roll of Honor of O. U.

By Ed. Mills, '30

ROY GITTINGER came to Oklahoma "to grow up with the country."

In his own words, that is the story of how he happened to drift into a new state from Iowa where he had already taken two years of college work.

Roy Gittinger was a stranger on the campus in March, 1901, but March, 1929 finds him the most beloved of the university's deans. He left Iowa to come to the new land of which his three uncles living here had told him. He came to a university of one building surrounded by small trees, an outpost of education on a vanishing frontier.

It would not be just to say Doctor Gittinger has seen the university grow from its modest start to one of the leading educational institutions of the southwest. He did not see it grow. He helped to make it grow. His is the part of the builder. He will go down in the university's history with that group of pioneers that brought about the transformation.

Dean Gittinger was married when he came here to school, and so he had but little time to take part in activities. He had to consider how to make a living.

He remembers, however, the fight between the prep school and university students, that Doctor Hadsell told of in an earlier issue. Having just enrolled in school, Gittinger was little known by either prep school or university students, so he took no part in the actual fight that occurred over the hanging of a little tin sign in the chapel hall.

When the scene of battle shifted from under the sign, however, it was Gittinger who, unmolested, took down the sign. The truth will out!

ACTOR GITTINGER received his A. B. degree in 1902. He was graduated in a class of five students. Last spring he helped in the graduation services of a class of approximately 700.

Of the class in which Doctor Gittinger graduated one is dead and the other four are in Norman. Kate Babb is a teacher in the university high school. Clyde Bogle is proprietor of a filling station here. Flor-
You'll find Dean Roy Gittinger in almost every worthwhile activity in the university. Modest to an extreme, Dean Gittinger has borne one of the heaviest burdens in the University as dean of undergraduates and administration. When the final history of the university is written, a high place of honor will be given him.

Dr. Charles M. Terry, head of the department of philosophy, is author of the leading review which appeared in a recent issue of the Standard, a magazine published in New York City. Doctor Perry reviewed Horace Bridge's book, "Taking the Name of Science In Vain," which deals with the effects on morals, literature, and art of recent psychological doctrines.

A NEW VIEW OF THE FIRST ADMINISTRATION BUILDING