A song, "In Ole Oklahoma," by Truman "Pinky" Tomlin, '34, radio entertainer and composer of a number of popular songs, was an easy winner in the contest conducted by the State Junior Chamber of Commerce for a new state song.

After hearing words and music of Tomlin's entry in the contest, the junior chamber contest committee decided that it was far ahead of the more than five hundred other contributions.

In Ole Oklahoma was formally presented to the Oklahoma City Symphony Orchestra at Oklahoma City which played the song in all possible variations, from swing time to symphony arrangements.

The words go like this:

In old Oklahoma Beneath the western skies, Where folks all say "Hi, stranger," And friendship never dies.

In ole Oklahoma Whiskey song all day, The Indians play their tom toms, To pass the time away.

Coyotes on the hilltop Tell their lonesome tale They say, "Settle down, you fogies, It's Twilight on the trail."

So in ole Oklahoma Beneath the western sky, I've lived there up to now, boys, I'll live there till I die.

The song has been published in sheet music form.
