Basketball Holds Spotlight

25 Years Ago

Sooner spotlight was on the University basketball team in 1925. Making a clean sweep of the first six games of the schedule, by January the squad stood at the head of the Missouri Valley Conference with eight wins and one loss. Tagged as the most likely candidate to take championship honors, the team was coached by Hugh McDermott, '20ba, now chairman of the physical education department for men.

The campus was the scene of much building and renovation—not unlike present conditions. The University's Stadium-Extension division was under way and had received pledges from some 5000 alumni, students, faculty members and friends—netting an amount of $68,596—of which $11,408 had been paid in at that time. An added seating capacity of from 15,481 to 52,000 was included in the stadium plans while the union plans called for construction to take place on the plot occupied at that time by the old gymnasium.

Oklahomans—and former students—were scattered over the nation in various occupational and professional haunts. Dr. Clarence B. Sullivan, '20ba, '22med (now a resident physician at Carnegie Hospital, Carnegie), was practicing medicine in Togas, Louisiana. William A. Blakely, '24ba, was teaching in Lecion, Texas. He is now teaching school in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Barney Whisnant, '17ba, now employed as a geologist in Fort Worth, Texas, held a similar position in Java, Dutch East Indies, and Wilbert Maynard, '17ba, now supervisor of music in the Townsend, Montana, schools, was on the faculty of the school of fine arts of the Hayes, Kansas, state normal school.

Sooner Portraits . . .

Following graduation from the University he joined the family bank in Clinton as assistant cashier. In 1941 he joined the National Bank Examiners' force. Although he considered it an excellent experience, commercial banking was what really interested him. So he went to Wichita, Kansas, in 1945 as cashier of the Southwestern National Bank. In 1945 he moved to the Union National Bank in Kansas City, Missouri. And in 1947 he was elected vice president of the Union Bank, becoming one of the youngest men in the country to hold a senior officer position in a large metropolitan bank.

Arch Wheeler likes people and he has a tremendous amount of energy which works toward promoting a better relationship between bankers and their customers. Since becoming head of the correspondent banking department of the Kansas City Bank, he has been busy calling on bankers and commercial customers throughout the south-west. This broad acquaintance has been another of the reasons why he has held many important positions in the city and state banking associations.

In 1948 he was married to the former Lucille Alice, '50ba. They make their home in Kansas City.

Arch is making plans for a large Kansas City Alumni luncheon this spring. He was informed by his predecessor, Richard T. (Dick) Pendleton, that the Sooner fans didn't have a football team during the 1950 season, he would be able to serve the luncheon on a bridge table. If football scores will raise the Sooner Alumni spirit, Arch may have to reserve Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium.
