Mr. Padgetts Rectifies

An old-fashioned boy was Chester Padgett, who didn't like the modern gadgets. He said he'd have none in his house.

Which proved a pain to his fair spouse. So Mrs. Padgett, when washing clothes, used tub and board with siphon hose. She kept the flat-iron behind the door and with a broom she swept the floor.

She went to visit her dear Aunt Grace and left old Padgett to run the place. He sweated and worked for about two days, which proved enough to change his ways.
