Steadfast---- through 48 Years of Change

During this bank's 48 years, business has risen and fallen, ebbed and flowed, passed through many cycles. In times that were adverse and trying, as well as through periods of enthusiasm and expansion, The First National Bank and Trust Company has endeavored to exert a steadying influence upon the business life of the community.

Time moves on while the world alternately has its ups and downs. Change is the rule and depressions, for example, always are followed by recoveries.

Through the many world changes during its history, this bank has been steadfast in its original purposes... to provide a safe place for deposits; to be a tried and true friend of sound business and to serve as a trustworthy steward of family fortunes.

This policy of constructive conservatism has served this community through good times and bad. It is our policy of today--and explains in part why this bank has more than 40,000 customers and more than half of the bank deposits of Oklahoma City.
