The author took several O.U. students on a trip to the Orient during the summer. Alumni helped make it possible, he says.

"Oklahoma" and "Asia" should go together like tart lemon and sweet milk. At least that's the usual approach. Actually, because of the 45th Division and the numerous Sooner alumni now resident in the Far East, there is no more strangeness in using the two expressions in one sentence. Thousands of Sooners have been there—and scores are there now.

These alumni have contributed worthwhile to the development of the programs of the Institute of Asiatic Affairs at the University of Oklahoma.

The first project involved the building of a reservoir of literature and artifacts at Norman that could subsequently be used on research projects.

Toward this project Sooners throughout Asia sent material from Japan, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaya, China, and India. Guy F. Webb, '24ba, alone sent over one hundred books on Japanese culture. Jack L. Manning, '30ba, sent and is continuing to send the Philippine daily newspaper Manila Bulletin. Others have contributed to the Institute of Asiatic Affairs' weekly broadcast, Orient in the News.

The Institute's program of 1953 involved a trip by University of Oklahoma students to Asia. The only way to activate this project on the limited budget available was by calling on O.U. alumni now located in the Far East, and through a generous contribution on the part of H. C. Price, Sr., of Bartlesville.

The three-month, 25,000 mile trip was an adventure in understanding. Feeling that Americans in Asia, whether tourists, business men, or governmental officials, did not always represent the American spirit, nor could they rightly interpret the rhythm of native life to us, we determined to go to these lands, live in the homes of the nationals, and work as they worked without contact with the Western world.

Contacting O.U. graduates in Asia long before starting our voyage, we asked them to make all necessary arrangements for our stays in the various countries visited.

The alumni responded nobly. In Japan it was Gary Sibeck, '51ba, who

Dr. Percy Buchanan and one of the students who toured Asia with him during the past summer, Carolyn Weckel, '53journ, Wichita, Kansas, had lunch with Ramon Magsaysay, leading candidate for Philippine president, and two political leaders of the Asian Republic.
escorted us to points of interest and fed us Japanese food during our half-day stay there.

In the Philippines Ed Wickburg, '49ba, '50ma, meeting us at the boat, had made all the arrangements for us to live in various Filipino homes in different provinces on the island of Luzon.

In Thailand through the efforts of Jerry James, '49ba, we were able to feel the pulse of Siamese life in a way impossible to tourists.

More use was not made of O.U. graduates, not because of lack of opportunity or alumni willingness to serve, but simply because we ran out of time. They were there. They wanted to help. But the time element intervened and we were forced to return to the States.

The project was a success. Again and again it will be carried out in the years to come with fifteen or twenty going annually to Southeast Asia, to Japan-China-Korea, to Burma-India-Pakistan, and to the Near East. The impact of mutual understanding—over a period of fifty to a hundred years—must inevitably weld our world into greater harmony. And this objective can only be reached by this same co-operation and help on the part of O.U. alumni.

Writing of the trip, one student expressed himself thusly:

"Speaking for myself, I can truthfully say that I learned more in the two months spent in Asia than I have learned in two years of college life, not just facts and figures about the world I live in and the peoples who inhabit it, but also in that the trip proved conclusively to me that the abolition of war through understanding and free economic and social intercourse among nations is an absolute necessity. I have also come to believe that the future of the United States, both politically and economically, lies with nations of Asia, and not Europe.

"During the summer, I made the acquaintance of many very kindly and friendly people, whose association I will cherish forever. The trip was one of the outstanding events of my life, and I earnestly hope that it will be continued in summers to come, and ultimately expanded so that someday all persons whose interest lies in the field of social science will have the opportunity to take it."

Without the support of the alumni the Institute of Asiatic Affairs would not be what it is today, nor could the Institute have undertaken such a far-flung project as the Asian tour of 1953.
