Business Administration

College of Business Administration graduates represent the diversity of American business and industry from the one-man store to the sprawling manufacturing plant. From this college which has produced more than 6,000 graduates, you meet the salesman, the accountant, the merchant.

The business graduate may be your banker—Howard Bozarth, '28bus, now president of City National Bank, Oklahoma City. Bozarth spent his apprenticeship with a commercial credit company and then Dun and Bradstreet before joining City National in 1930. Starting in the bookkeeping department, he advanced to other positions and was named president in 1958. He has seen the modernization of the bank, completion of a $800,000 drive-in service and parking garage and interior renovation.

The business graduate may be your grocer—he may be Elmer Hale, Jr., '41bus, president of Hale-Halsell, wholesale grocery house. Hale manages the firm with warehouses in Durant, Tulsa and McAlester. Its territory includes part of Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas. Hale lives in McAlester where the company roasts, grinds and packages coffee and bottles extracts and flavorings. In his home town he serves on the board of directors of the McAlester Foundation working for industrial growth of the city.

A myriad of lives is represented in graduates of the College of Arts and Sciences. The historian, the scientist, the economist—all began here.

Here Sam R. Faris, '41bs, '47ms, '49ph.d., became a chemist. Faris joined Socony-Mobil Oil Company in 1949. He is now supervisor of six senior scientists doing research in the fundamentals of fluid mechanics in the company’s Dallas lab. The research team is concerned with methods of oil recovery, revising old techniques and searching for new ones.

The journalists, such as Paul T. Miller, '30, encompass many of the arts and sciences in communicating every aspect of the news to the public. Miller of Rochester, N. Y., became president of the Gannett enterprises in 1957. The chain holds 22 newspapers, 5 radio and 3 television stations in 4 states. Miller began his career on Oklahoma newspapers and was assistant general manager for Associated Press before joining Gannett.

More than 17,000 degrees have been granted by this college, some as the basis for graduate study, some as the culmination of formal schooling.

Fine Arts

Although graduates of the College of Fine Arts may seem immersed in aesthetics, their practical contributions in teaching and in the world of entertainment cannot be denied.

A Sooner who has combined both these talents is Joseph Benton, '20ba, '24ba in voice, '44ba. Benton has been a professor of music at O.U. since 1944. Under the name of Giuseppe Bentonelli, he was acclaimed one of the leading tenors of the European opera stage from 1924 to 1935. He appeared with the Chicago Opera and the Metropolitan Opera and on nation-wide concert tours before bringing his talents to teaching at the University.

Dennis Weaver, '48ba, has found another medium of entertainment in which the College of Fine Arts is also well represented. As "Chester" on G assignments, Weaver and his "Mister Dillon" have become familiar to millions of viewers. An University track star, Weaver has utilized his O.U. study to correspond to contemporary entertainment.
Miss Lydia Franziska Diewock, Heilbronn, Germany, and John Henry Horn, II, '60, Oklahoma City, were married December 30, in the First Lutheran Church, Oklahoma City. The Horns have established a home in Oklahoma City.

Miss Carolyn Arlene DeLaughter, '59, and James L. Provines, '60, both of Oklahoma City, were married December 19, 1959, in Kelham Avenue Baptist Church, Oklahoma City. They are living in Norman.

Miss Joyce Wilson, Menlo Park, California, and Robert W. Carson, '60, Oklahoma City, were married December 19, 1959, in St. Luke's Methodist Church, Oklahoma City. The Carsons have established a home in Norman.

Miss Sandra Jane Anderson, '60, Oklahoma City, and John Dewight Johnson, '60, Seminole, were married December 20, 1959, in St. Luke's Methodist Church, Oklahoma City. The couple will live at Norman where Johnson is a senior with a major in nuclear engineering.

BIRTHS: Jim Harris, '60, and Mrs. Harris, the former Donna Sue Cason, '58, Norman, have chosen the name Cathy Leigh for their daughter born January 14. Harris is a student at O.U., and Mrs. Harris was formerly a receptionist for the University of Oklahoma Association.

Richard Garden, '60, and Mrs. Garden, Norman, have chosen the name Richard, Jr., for their son born January 28 in Norman. Garden is a senior, attending O.U., and Mrs. Garden was formerly secretary to Guy Brown, director of the Alumni Development Fund.

COMING IN THE MAY

Sooner

Fourteen O.U. drama students along with Rupel J. Jones, drama school director, are now hopscotching across the Pacific, presenting "George Washington Slept Here" to American servicemen on bases ranging from Tokyo to Manila. The once-in-a-lifetime chance to tour the Orient became theirs last summer when the University was selected to send a roadshow to military installations on behalf of the USO and in cooperation with the American Educational Theater Association and the Department of Defense.

The May issue of Sooner Magazine will feature a story and pictures on the backbreaking work and Chinese puzzle dilemmas met and solved by the troupe before its gay departure April 4. In addition to reams of paperwork on passports and shots, troupe members had to fit nightly rehearsals into busy schedules calling for completion of a semester's work in eight weeks.

Pharmacy

From the College of Pharmacy came the first graduating class. Now more than 1,500 have received degrees and entered all phases of the profession from selling the drugs to their manufacture to the fundamental research where new drugs are discovered.

James Bradley, '50pharm, is one of those concerned with producing the drugs. He became president of Smith-Dorsey Pharmaceutical Company, Lincoln, Neb., in January. The company distributes their products nationally, specializing in drugs for colds and allergies.

Bradley worked first as a retail druggist. Then he joined a pharmaceutical house as a salesman, advanced to district and regional manager and on to director of sales and promotion before joining Smith-Dorsey.

Or a pharmacy graduate may take another path in serving the public as Wallace Taylor, '40pharm. After military service Taylor returned to Norman and in 1944 purchased a drug store. In 1959 Taylor expanded with another Norman store. He is typical of countless other pharmacists across the state in his service and skill. In fact, so much so that about 1,800 retail druggists have chosen him president for the coming year of the Oklahoma Pharmaceutical Association.
