MARRIAGES

FLOYD E. MILLER

Floyd E. Miller, '18 arts-sc., Skiatook editor, died Sunday, January 11, of pneumonia. An account from The Tulsa Tribune says: "Miller was a self-made man."

"Born near Kiowa, Kansas, he came to Oklahoma with his parents at the age of four, and they settled near Manchester, Oklahoma. There he received his early education and, at the same time other boys were entering offices and stores, considering that early education was insufficient, Miller was making his plans to continue his schooling."

"His father, Freeman Miller, a member of the territorial senate and now a prominent lawyer of Jenks, was unable to be of assistance, and young Miller began working his way through school, trying to achieve his ambition to be a teacher."

"It was while he was working his way through Northwestern State normal at Alva, that he had his first experience with the newspaper business. He went to work on the Alva Daily Pioneer."

"After his graduation, he became superintendent of the Lambert Oklahoma schools and carried on his journalistic career as the publisher of a small paper there. Then he went to the University of Oklahoma to take his M. A. degree."

"While at the university, he became a member of the state food administration during the war, and when he finished the university course in 1918, he went to Jenks as superintendent of schools. There he founded the Jenks News and edited it in time outside his school."

"Going to Skiatook in 1922 he purchased and became editor of the Skiatook News. He took a prominent part in civic and political activities. Last year he was president of the chamber of commerce and twice was candidate for the Democratic nomination to the state legislature, the first time last summer. Besides his newspaper interests, he was part owner of a Tulsa drug store."

"He was a member of the Skiatook Presbyterian church, Masonic lodge, Akdar Shrine and the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias."

"Funeral services were to be held at the First Presbyterian church at Skiatook Tuesday morning at 9:30. Burial will be at Stillwater."

"He is survived by his widow, three sons, Glee, Floyd, jr., and Freeman; the father; the mother, Mrs Allie McAdams, Anthony, Kansas, two sons, Miss Floyd Miller, Andover, Kansas, and Mrs Jess Watson, Oklahoma City."
Spring Showers Come in April and also
Spring Sports

In Soonerland, Sooner sports patrons who like tennis may look forward with eagerness to seeing the Texas-Oklahoma dual tennis match on the varsity courts, April 25.

Annually, the University of Texas produces what are probably the outstanding intercollegiate tennis players in the nation. Allison, Bell, Barnes, Thalheimer, White—these Longhorns have established their prowess in Davis cup, national intercollegiate and sectional tournaments all over the United States. Although the Sooners lost all six of their matches to the 1931 Longhorn team at Austin last fall, they carried the Texans to three sets in three matches and gave a good account of themselves in two others. Oklahoma conquered Southern Methodist and Rice at Dallas and Houston on that invasion.

Coach Lawrence "Jap" Haskell's baseballers, co-champions of the "Big Six" conference last spring, open the home baseball season April 24 and 25 with two contests against Missouri at Owen field.

The Missouri tennis team also comes to Norman for a dual conference match on April 24.

Light and Power Co. at Lawton, Oklahoma.

His address is 110 North 3rd, Lawton.

Stuart Milam, P. E., is with Phillips and Milam Company, Chelsea, Oklahoma.

Charles K. Ittner, E. E., is a results engineer with the O. G. & E. Co. Oklahoma City. His address is 129 S. W. 44th, Oklahoma City.

Vester E. Willoughby, C. E., is an instructor in mechanics at the University of Oklahoma. His address is 600 East 8th, Ada, Oklahoma.

Charles K. Ittner, E. E., was president of the Engineers club last year. He is at present in the distributing engineering department of the O. G. & E. Co. Oklahoma City. His address is 129 S. W. 44th, Oklahoma City.

The curriculum has been revised from time to time in order to maintain proper correlation with the requirements of recognized educational policy and the demands of present day engineering practice. Scholastic work is reflected by the successful work being performed by the graduates in practice.

The engineer, by virtue of the kind of training he has received, may be a most valuable member of society if his attitude toward the community be one of service. It is hoped that former graduates are meeting this responsibility in a fine way as well as achieving success in the more technical and professional fields.

Acknowledgement is made of the assistance rendered by our former students and friends in pointing out the possibilities and advantages of a college education. Their efforts have resulted in many capable young men entering school and graduating with records of definite achievement.

Therefore, on behalf of the faculty and the students of the school of civil engineering, I wish to extend cordial greetings. And let me remind you that a message or, better, a visit is always acceptable. In this way the bonds of friendship are strengthened and the glory of O. U. kept ever bright.

FROM J. F. BROOKES

T he annual St. Pat's occasion is at hand. It is opportune and natural to think of similar occasions of the past and associate with them the names and personalities of former students. Many interesting impressions remain as we think of this singular occasion when the engineering student comes into his own, so to speak. It is a time when scholastic work pauses and youthful enthusiasm holds sway. Truly the graduating enginee feels that his "college course" is complete if "St. Pat" has smiled upon him.

Now for a word about the school of civil engineering. The number of students enrolled is larger than in past years, indicating a satisfactory growth. This year a highway material laboratory was established for the testing and investigation of materials of this specific field. The curriculum has been revised from time to time in order to maintain proper correlation with the requirements of recognized educational policy and the demands of present day engineering practice. Scholastic work is reflected by the successful work being performed by the graduates in practice.
