THE SOONER MAGAZINE

A medical education. This system is followed with great fairness. In this connection it should be realized that all medical standards of education and of practice are set up for the protection of the public.

The medical school is now turning out as graduates annually three and one-half times as many physicians as it was twenty years ago.

The hospitals of the medical school receive indigent patients from every county in the state. The beds are allocated to the counties in direct proportion to their population, the fairest plan to follow so that the whole state may be served. The only exception is that Oklahoma and Tulsa counties, which have many other facilities, are only allotted one-half of the quota to which they would ordinarily be entitled, so that more beds may be available for the use of other counties.

These hospitals are constantly obliged to refuse patients because of the absolute lack of bed capacity. Acute emergency cases are often placed in beds in the hallways; a most undesirable procedure for all concerned. There is constantly a waiting list for both hospitals. The situation can only be remedied by increasing the size of both hospitals, and of course depends upon the availability of state income from which appropriations can be made by the legislature.

Last year these two hospitals cared for nearly 7,000 patients in the wards, occupying a total of 141,000 hospital days, and gave 50,000 treatments in the Out-Patient Department.

Around the medical school, which forms the nucleus, with the other fine hospitals and the unusually competent group of physicians practicing in Oklahoma City, is gradually being built up a great medical center for Oklahoma and the southwestern states.
