TO MY FORMER STUDENTS:

Your former classmates would enjoy hearing of your present whereabouts, and would take particular pride in reading of your success since you left the old school.

Place a business card in The Sooner Magazine. You'll find mine in this issue.

Inform them, too, of what you are doing by sending news items, regarding yourself and friends, frequently to the alumni note section of your publication. Let's renew our old acquaintanceships.

Yours for a bigger and better alumni association,

Irving Perrine,

"When Freeman W. Burford, (ex- '21), a Tulsaan, announced last summer the formation of the Burford Oil Co. and plans to build a modern refinery at Pecos, in Ward County, west Texas, he added that 'it will be the last word in refinery construction.' He has made good, and now is giving up all of his duties with other firms to devote all of his time to the Burford refinery at Pecos. The Burford refinery is a million dollar plant, with a modern and efficient pipe still, which will handle 7,000 barrels a day of Winkler field crude, and has a cracking capacity of 4,000 barrels a day, in addition to proper reformation facilities. Some of the interesting features of the plant are the electrically-driven charging pumps and the modern and continuous gasoline treating systems. The plant is served by a 34-mile pipeline owned jointly by the Burford company and Skelly Oil Co., which connects with the Hendricks field in Winkler county. The refinery is located adjacent to the town of Pecos on land contiguous to both the Texas and Pacific and Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railroads. The private switching track and loading rack writes, 'We are completing a new office building on the refinery premises within the city limits of Pecos, which will house our office force and executive offices.' The general offices of the Burford Oil Co. are being moved from Shreveport soon. Burford has just completed three years of service as vice president and general manager of the Crystal Oil Refinery Co., and his resignation is due to the maturity of plans in connection with his own company."—Tulsa Daily World, April 9.

Hutton Bellah, '23 journ., publisher and editor of the Altus Times-Democrat, received considerable favorable state publicity when he decided to continue in journalism instead of becoming secretary to Governor Holloway.

"Hutton Bellah will go down in history as the wisest man of his time," declared the Shawnee Morning News.

"Taken out on a high mountain and shown the wonders of the world and the glory that would come to him if he would only undertake the duties of secretary to the governor, he blushingly with the suddenness of the proposal but ruefully turned his head and remarked: 'Governor Holloway, I love you and I will do anything I can do in my humble way to further your administration but I love my Times-Democrat and my Altus more. Anyway, I am first of all a newspaperman and not a politician.' The Frederick Leader declared, "He can be of more service to his fellow citizens in his own sanctum than placating impatient callers and dividing the sheep from the goats in the outer office of the gubernatorial suite at the capitol."
