DISCOVERY AND LEARNING

Education, in the large, is concerned with achievement—achievement in all of these realms of human endeavor. Life is lived at the highest level by those who have achieved high rating in all of these. But few of us ever have our lives enriched by the conquests of all these aspects. The artist is frequently too subjective to be human, and the devout man of God is often prejudiced against knowledge.

Learning, therefore, as a function of ed-

This is Neil Nettleton, son of Mr. Tuly A. Nettleton, '23 B. A., and Mrs. Ruth S. Nettleton, '26 B. A., of Newton Centre, Massachusetts. According to Mrs. Nettleton young Neil keeps his father hard at work as a member of the editorial staff of "The Christian Science Monitor," Boston, and is worth it.
