Summing up University sports activity since the last issue of the magazine, the new football coach hasn’t yet been hired and the basketball team is eagerly looking forward to the acquisition of its first experienced war vet, rangy Dick Reich, the Oklahoma City lad who plays with his mouth open.

President George Cross’ recent statement to the press that the University Board of Regents, who for the past ten years has controlled the appointment of the school’s football coach, had “given no instructions nor offered any suggestions” in the matter of choosing a successor to Dewey “Snorter” Lutton, who resigned recently because of poor health, was the only new development as the magazine went to press.

The president explained that while the regents would decide which of two candidates submitted to them would get the job, the responsible task of reducing the considerable field of applicants down to the final round of two would fall to himself, to Athletic Director Lawrence “Jap” Haskell and to a three-man screening committee from the athletic council, Walter Kraft, Dr. L. N. Morgan and Neil Johnson.

Reich, a marine lieutenant who was wounded at Iwo Jima, and who in his last game as a junior in 1943 scored 17 points against Wyoming’s national collegiate champions in an NCAA playoff game at Kansas City, will resuscitate Coach House Drake’s team soon as he gets in condition. That will take time. A willowy 183-pounder here three years ago, Reich now scales 215 and is corpulent as an alderman.

Here is the Sooner basketball record to date:

All were non-conference games, the last three being played in the All-College tournament at Oklahoma City’s Municipal Auditorium during the holidays.

Feature of Oklahoma’s season to date has been the rebounding and scoring of Paul Courty, 6-foot-3-inch freshman from Wichita, Kansas, who in his last game as a junior in 1943 scored 17 points against Wyoming’s national collegiate champions in an NCAA playoff game at Kansas City, will resuscitate Coach House Drake’s team soon as he gets in condition. Keith’s victory apparently was the culmination of a secret 15-year training grind which he started a few years after graduation from O. U. where he was a crack distance runner.

The sports publicist has run a mile or more almost daily for the past 15 years, explaining that he was running only for exercise and his own amusement.

It was revealed that Keith was pointing for a big crosscountry race to prove that life definitely begins after 40.

He proved it by strategy that would have done credit to that great Confederate leader, Stonewall Jackson, or the old master himself, General Robert E. Lee.

Carefully husbanding his strength the Confederate home veteran coasted along in the backwash of the pack for most of the race, then spurred into the lead and grimly retained his advantage with all the speed the rebels showed against the Federals in the first battle of Bull Run.

The next seven men across the finish line were Canaris, Sooner; Koval, Tinker Field; Kelly Franklin, unattached, Norman, Oklahoma; Russell Lyday, Sooners; and Lieutenant Morton Schwartz of Will Rogers Field who formerly ran for City College of New York.

Chevrons were really chevrons during the Spanish-American War. The ones Betty Jennings, Norman, junior in the School of Pharmacy, is trying on are man-sized and green, with a maltese cross. They were worn by a pharmacist in the U. S. Army Hospital Corps, and are from the military pharmacy museum currently being assembled by Professor Ralph Bierwert, School of Pharmacy, O. U.

Do you have anything to add to this museum?

Keith and Confederacy Stage

By HOWARD VAN DYKE, ’33ba
City Editor, Norman Transcript

Harold Keith, ’29ba, ’39ma, 42-year-old sports publicity director at the University recently injected new life into the dying cause of the Confederacy by winning the crosscountry run at Owen Field.

The victory was a surprise both to the die-hard rebels and Keith, who has strained his tired legs for the last 15 years trying to keep up with the youngsters.

He took the lead a half mile from home and although followed closely by John Canaris and Mel Kendry, University of Oklahoma runners, Keith sprinted the last 220 yards to win by a 15-yard margin. The run of slightly more than three miles was the first annual Oklahoma A.A.U. crosscountry.

As a “rib” for his old coach, Sooner Track Mentor John Jacobs, who has kidded him the last 15 years for trying to stay up with the youngsters, Keith wore to victory in the race a bright red and gray jersey on the front of which was inscribed the words “Confederate Home, Ardmore, Oklahoma,” and on the back of which was sewn a Confederate flag.
Team scores, high score winning, were University of Oklahoma 25, Confederate Home, Ardmore, Oklahoma 9, Tinker Field 5 and Will Rogers Field 4.

Coiffin, the barefoot runner from Tinker Field who formerly ran for Syracuse University's cross-country team, led the runners out of the Sooner Field. He stayed from 10 to 20 yards ahead for the next two and one-half miles until Keith and Canaris caught him just before the last dash for the finish line.

Keith's last collegiate competition was 17 years ago, in 1928, when competing for the Sooners he was an upset winner of the Penn Relays 3,000 meters steeplechase in the rain at Franklin Field, Philadelphia. He also capped the Missouri Valley Conference indoor mile and two-mile championship the same night in Des Moines, Iowa, that year.

John Jacobs, Sooner track mentor, was so flabbergasted by Keith's upset victory that he knocked off for the afternoon and went quail hunting. Returning from the hunt at dark he said the sports scribe "looked pretty good out there. I'm going to try and get him back in school, I need runners."

Jacobs also divulged that Keith's mother "came down to see him run. She was running around out there like a young filly."

"Keith had no shots on his legs so he could get home after the race," Jacobs said in discussing the condition of the Rebel's underpinnings after the three-mile struggle.

"Keith must be 30 years old," Jacobs added. Told the runner in gray was 42, Jacobs ejaculated: "Cripes, I think I'll try running again. I've been satisfied to run Clyde Littlefield of Texas in the newspapers, but maybe I actually could run on a track," the Sooner cinder expert mused.

Religious Activity Week

Scheduled for February 24

Religious Emphasis Week for the University will be held this year during the week beginning Sunday, February 24 and ending March 1, Ted Ledeen, secretary of the YM.C.A. has announced.

Levora Williams, vice president of the Inter-religious Council, is general chairman. Plans are well underway for activities of the week, Mr. Ledeen said.

The purpose of Religious Emphasis Week is to foster and encourage religious activities on the campus throughout the year.

Phillips Moulten, national Religious Emphasis Week official, has conferred with the Inter-religious Council, the "Y" Cabinet, and the Ministerial Alliance concerning speakers and arrangements. Tentative plans include six outstanding out-of-state speakers.

New Faces in Law Barn

Dr. Olin L. Browder, Jr., and Dr. E. D. Phelps have been appointed to positions on the faculty of the School of Law and began service the second semester.

Dr. Browder practiced law in Chicago during 1938-39, and since that time has been an instructor in the law department of the University of Alabama, University of Tennessee, and was attorney for the Tennessee Valley Authority. In 1943 he became a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, from which position he came to the University faculty.

Dr. Phelps taught law at the University of Illinois and the University of South Dakota before joining the faculty of the Western Reserve University School of Law, Cleveland, Ohio. He was practicing law in Cleveland at the time of his appointment to the University faculty.

67 Poems Accepted

Sixty-seven poems by Dr. Gustav Mueller, chairman of the department of philosophy at the University of Oklahoma, have been accepted for publication by the A. Francke Company in Bern, Switzerland. The new volume, Abseits meaning "aside," is scheduled to appear early in 1946.

O. U. Prexy's Administrative Staff

With the return last month of Dr. Royden J. Dangerfield, former dean of the Graduate College, from his duties with the U.S. Navy as Lt. Commander and from his duties as member of the State Department—a "top flight" administrative staff under the George L. Cross administration is practically completed. Dr. Dangerfield fills the position of administrative assistant to the president of the University of Oklahoma.

When Dr. George L. Cross was appointed by the Board of Regents to the permanent presidency, he announced to the press that in setting up his administrative staff, he would make appointments under four principal divisions to assist him in carrying forward the administrative details of the University properly.

Early in June, 1944, Dr. Glenn C. Couch was named director of student affairs and later dean of the University College. At the same time Roscoe Cate, who was then the acting manager of the Oklahoma Memorial Union and acting executive secretary of the University of Oklahoma Alumni Association, was appointed President Cross and the Regents as assistant to the president in charge of finance.

Dr. Paul Eldridge, '19ba, associate professor of English on leave of absence, has resigned to accept a position at the University of Nevada. At the University he will hold an associate professorship.

Dr. Roy T. House, professor of modern languages and editor of Books Abroad, has been elected to membership in the Association of Escritores y Artistas Americanos, as well as to membership on the staff of the Association's official monthly magazine, America.

Henry L. Kampfhoener, professor of architecture, served as a member of the jury of award for the Beaux Arts Institute of Design in New York recently. He helped to judge the student design problems from the various schools of architecture in America which are affiliated with the institute.

Dr. E. Thayer Curry has resumed his duties as assistant professor of speech after a three and one-half years' leave of absence during which he was in the Navy. Dr. Curry will be promoted to the rank of lieutenant commander at the end of his terminal leave.
