Suites for the Sweet

The Widow Jones was on the spot.
The whole town talked and talked a lot.
"Yes sir, by gum, they say it's so.
"The widow's got 'era sittin' room beau."
The ladies were shocked. The men, they'd wink,
'Causes no one could guess, who was the gink.

The gossip was started by Minnie Clay
When Widow Jones went to town one day.
"Yes'ir," said Minnie, "she told me, she did
And giggled, I swear, like a high school kid."

Now, the Widow Jones had lots of dough
And Ezra Willshad been her beau.
So he r'ared up, snortin' and prime
And said, "By golly, I'll beat this time."

So about that night, he dressed up slick
And went to propose and marry her quick.

Well, she accepted. They married that night
Before old Ezra remembered his spite.

Well, he woke up and wanted to know
What had happened to that other beau.
"There warn't no beau, now Ezra Will.
"I just went up to Doc and 'Bills.
"She thought I said, 'sweetie.' That do defeat.
"What I got was a sittin' room suite."
