New Film Reader in Library

A new Recordak Library Film reader, Model C, has been set up in the library, Miss Opal Carr, ’33lib.sci, reference assistant, announced.

A universal type reviewer for use with 35mm, or 16mm, safety film records, the machine is equipped with a special blue lens for reading in the light. The blue lens makes reading easier and is a great improvement over the old reading machine in the library. This type also uses newspaper film.

For use in the film reader, the library has a collection of 300 reels of books printed in England before 1600. These films are kept in files chemically treated to regulate the temperature.
