Did You Say That!

Quips and Quotes that indicate what alumni are thinking and saying. Observations that don’t make the papers.

“Am I going to the ball games? I’ve been out of school for 25 years and I didn’t know that you could miss one.”—Mrs. Bernice Ford Price, ’25, Oklahoma City housewife.

“Recently I visited the Woolaroc Museum established by the late Frank Phillips. The thing that impressed me most was a display of a cancelled check for $38,500,000.”—Maurice Willis, ’42pharm, owner of Central Pharmacy in Altus.

“Ted Beaird and I were roommates at O.U. We were ‘freshmen of the flesh’ grew up over here at Blair never been out of the county before going to O.U. Distance meant a lot in those days Oklahoma City was a hard day’s drive and three broken springs Ted and I debated together never lost one in three year’s competition. Ted furnished the oratory and I supplied the logic.”—Bob Reid, ’20ba, Altus businessman, reminiscing about his friendship with the late executive secretary of the Alumni Association, Ted Beaird, ’21ba.

“I know that football tickets provide a difficult problem for the University. I used to have a friend who worked in the ticket office and he told me that he couldn’t get any special consideration for anyone just one ticket for himself.”—Curtis Tatton, ’53ed, employed by an oil company in Pauls Valley, offering some salvage for harried ticket handlers.

“I like to watch the O.U. band. But it doesn’t seem to have the spirit that it once had. It used to be traditional for band members to wear their hats backward after an O.U. victory. What ever happened to that?”—Martin Cassity, ’37-39, Ardmore businessman. (Leonard Haug, director of the band, gave the following answer: the bandsmen may still turn their caps around for victory if the entire band votes to do so. He states that they turned them around for some games in the past few seasons. He denies that the band does not possess the same spirit it once had. However, he feels that on a national as well as local scale, the pep band of yesterday has given way to the precision playing and marching organization that provides the pageantry for football games.)

“I ought to call Eddie Crowder. He’s holding the ball crooked.”—Barth P. Jiggs Walker, ’40geol, ’40Law, Oklahoma City attorney. Comment followed scrutiny of Sooner Magazine’s cover for September. (Crowder’s not to blame. Engravers and editor are the ones who tilted the ball.)

“Why didn’t you get the same artist that did the fine September coverto do the one for the magazine’s Student Issue (May, 1953). That pink thing with the black curlicues was awful. I sure did like September’s.”—Garner Collins, ’19ba, O.U.’s director of housing. (It was the same artist. He’s Ferdinand Richardson, ’53fa, of Lawton. We think he did a fine job too.)

“I got them (football tickets) way back when. They are just perfect (on 50-yard line). I’m close to the press box and can see the board on which the statistics are kept. I can keep up with the total yardage, first downs and other details Harold Keith (director of sports publicity) is the finest fellow I ever knew.”—George Dinkler, ’33pharm, owner of Hennessey’s Rexall Drug. (Proof that 50-yard line tickets do exist.)

“...Alma Mater and mater and pater are to be congratulated and should be proud for having sent Ann here. She is being acclaimed by all...”—Clarence A. Cooley, ’17, president of the San Francisco and Bay Area Alumni club. Telegram concerned the appearance of Ann Bailey, O.U.’s representative in the Berkeley, California, Miss Football U.S.A. contest held in mid-September.

Off in High Gear . . .

South Oval, and parkways north of Brooks St. Work around the Union was to have been completed by Notre Dame game time.

With the prospect of the Notre Dame-Ohio State clash and Oklahoma's general football fever, students as well as state citizens were going to all means to secure tickets.

More than 100 students falsified marital status to obtain two season athletic ducats during enrollment. Ken Farris, business manager of the department of athletics, and the administration checked the status of all students who bought tickets for wives in order to weed the honestly marrieds from the frauds.

As the news was released, President Cross gave the illegal married couples a week to clear themselves. Students who did not confess had both tickets jerked and their money refunded.
