

chief of the tribe, who died a short time ago.

In speaking of the trip to Mexico, Mrs. Davis said:

"The country the Seminole party visited was wild and rugged. When we arrived we found an assembly of natives having some sort of a feast. They are all blanket Indians and reminded me of the early life of the Seminoles. The Indians were all seated around a fire on which was a great kettle full of gruel. I do not know whether the Seminoles will go to Mexico or not, but it is certainly a beautiful country."