father you see him there White Horse reluctantly consented to let him return with the Agency men & go with me to the Stone School House, where I must show him my brother, "I no see him, your life for his"

When White Horse went to the Agency with me, which was not for some weeks, he went with me to the Stone School house, & sa'is facturily verified my word by recognizing my "Behanna" brother, & partaking of a hearty dinner at his table

The Texans, or rather desperadoes from that State, as will hereafter be shown, were in the practice of drawing heavy contributions from the Indian pony herds; hence the antipathy of the Indians to all the "Behanna" people for them all; but when they come in and drive the children out of my tent, they may go away, as I shall do nothing for them. Afterwards, one of them, as if to find out whether I really meant what I said, on a younger boy's coming in, drove him out; whereupon, without many words, as I was fully satisfied that I had been understood, I took hold of him and put him out of the tent. It is my determination that children shall not be abused in or driven out of my tent by the young men, if it lies in my power to prevent it. Fully believing that a firm hand is as essential to success in the management of the Indian as a kind heart, both should be joined together, and well stocked with patience.

19th. <sup>My birth anniversary</sup>— Though surrounded most of the day by these wild Kiowa children or wilder young men, I have not been wholly devoid of feeling.

In looking over the events and experiences of my past life, it appears as though it had been nearly a failure. I see but little accomplished of all that might and should have been done, not having lived day by day so near to the Fountain of life and strength as I should; weakness, and even death, has been my lot, and I have gone halting all my life.

Even here, though endeavoring to live one day at a time, to gather my bread day by day, seeking help, strength, and wisdom from the true Fount of every blessing, I see but little improvement, and must confess with one formerly, "The good that I would I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do;" and that "when I
