

Sitting Bull's address to the Silent Eaters protesting the Treaty of 1889.

By Lone-man 7

301

During the summer of 1889, a commission, consisting some of the most distinguished citizens of the United States, including governors, senators, Congressmen, army officers and church dignitaries, was sent to Standing Rock Agency for the purpose of effecting a treaty with the Indians, whereby the government, through the above mentioned representatives a proposition was offered to the Indians, should they assent to relinquish a large portion of Tribal domain.

The sentiment of the Indians was a split between the Friendly Indians and the Hostile Band of Sitting Bull followers.

Sitting Bull, heretofore, had always refused to make any speeches before any body of government representatives, on Tribal matters, feeling that, inasmuch as he was holding the highest Tribal office, he rather keep <sup>neutral</sup> quiet and let some one else voice the wishes of the Indians.

At the council of Silent Eaters, upon the request of the members, he delivered the following speech.

"Friends and Relatives: Our minds are again disturbed by the Great Fathers' representations, the Indian Agent, the Squaw-men, the mixed-bloods, the interpreters and the favorite ration-chiefs. What is it they want of us at this time?
They want us to give up another chunk of our Tribal land.
This is not the first time nor the last time. They will try to gain possession of the last piece of ground we possess.