followed behind him. Soon some of the birds arrived and complained that Hahala tricked them and that the race was unfair.

The judges put their heads together ^{in conference} and Hinken said.. "To be fair with all let all the birds use their best judgment about migrating to the South."

The Dakotas had been living in the Black Hills from generation to generation. Some time after this race of the birds, they camped along ~~along~~ ^{between Sturgis and Council Grove} this race course, and every night thereafter, they could hear the flight of the birds and from that time, this valley was popularly known ^{by the Dakotas} as "Kininyanka Ocanhu." "The (Birds) Race Course Valley."
